Talks by Year-End—Taylor:

U.S. Will Blunt Red Offensive

SAIGON (UPI)—Retiring U.S. ambassador Maxwell Taylor said Saturday U.S. and South Vietnamese forces would "blunt and bloody" the Communists during the monsoon fighting now underway.

U.K. Minister Supports U.S. Policy

WEST HARTLEPOOL, England (Reuters)—A Labor government minister Saturday expressed strong support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam as the government came under strong opposition attack for leading itself to anti-American propaganda by Communist North Viet Nam.

Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley told a Labor party meeting in northwest England:

"Some people say that the Americans can stop this war. That is just what they are trying to do. In my opinion, the Americans have more justice on their side than has ever been given credit."

He said several peace-making attempts by the U.S. were turned down by the Chinese Communists, who frustrated every forward-looking step.

Taylor also predicted the Communists might be forced to talk peace by the end of 1965.

The former chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, who is being replaced as ambassador by Henry Cabot Lodge, the man he succeeded, said the Communists might score local, limited victories.

"BLUNT, BLOODY"

"But in terms of final victory, I would expect that we will be able to blunt and bloody this offensive so that by the end of this calendar year or the end of the monsoon fighting, Hanoi will be able to draw very little comfort from the outcome of the military operations."

"One of the primary purposes of our military operations here has been to show the leaders in Hanoi that this is a losing game," Taylor said. "They can't win in South Viet Nam and, furthermore, they're going to continue to take losses from our bombardment in the north."

"If, at the end of this rainy season, they have lost on both fronts, I would think indeed that it would be time for stocktaking in the north."

Washington (UPI)—The United States plans to expand its troop strength in the South Viet Nam war to 100,000 or more by late summer or early fall, it was learned Saturday.

This calls for an increase of at least 25,000 men, including thousands in army combat units.

100,000 Men In Viet By Fall

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States plans to expand its troop strength in the South Viet Nam war to 100,000 or more by late summer or early fall, it was learned Saturday.

This calls for an increase of at least 25,000 men, including thousands in army combat units.

Stewart Urges Neutral South

HULL, England (CP)—Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart called Saturday for a neutral South Viet Nam with no foreign troops or bases.

He also defended the Labor government's peace-making attempts.

Stewart proposed a conference as soon as possible regardless under what auspices it is called. He spoke at a rally in this northern England city.

Man Bears Burden To Save the World

TORONTO (UPI)—A man who believed bears were going to take over the world, shot a 1,500-pound one in the Elverdale Zoo Saturday.

At least a dozen shots were pumped into the animal before it collapsed and died in front of horrified spectators, including many children.

Police officers who rushed to the zoo arrested a man—Teddy Karl Hysell, 33.

Queen, Princess Doing Well

King 'Retires' Early

CORFU, Greece (AP)—Queen Anne-Marie and her new-born daughter were reported doing very well Saturday, but King Constantine had to take to his bed, exhausted.

Early Saturday the queen, the world's youngest at 18, gave birth to a 9-pound, 11-ounce girl, who becomes heir to the throne of Greece.

A medical bulletin said it was a normal birth "and Her Majesty and the newborn child are doing very well."

But a palace official said the king, 35, exhausted from an all-night vigil and excitement, had retired for a rest.

Constantine, wearing a surgical mask, was in the delivery room for the birth—a specially prepared room in the summer palace on this Ionian island.

Immediately afterward, Constantine telephoned Premier George Papandreu in Athens, touching off a 21-gun salute and the pealing of church bells.

Dressed in an open-neck shirt and slacks, the grinning monarch hastened to the gates of the palace, where a crowd was waiting and shouting: "It's a girl!"

As church bells echoed across Corfu's green hills and valleys, people ran into the street in celebration. Congratulations flowed in from around the world.

Anne-Marie's mother, Queen Ingrid of Denmark, Constantine's mother, Queen Mother Frederika, and Crown Prince Irene, Constantine's sister, also were present at the birth.

The queen's father, King Frederik IX of Denmark, will fly to Corfu this week to see his first grandchild.

Consultation Fees

Doctors Threaten Mass Resignations

SWANSEA, Wales (AP)—British doctors Saturday threatened a mass walkout from the national free health scheme unless they are permitted to charge consultation fees—and thus discourage hypochondriacs and malingerers.

A resolution to this effect was passed by vote at the annual conference of the British Medical Association after one of the 500 delegates, Dr. Alan L. Bussay, told the meeting: "NO MISTAKE"

"Let there be no mistake—the present system of free access has resulted in a national soup kitchen of health."

Representatives of the medical association have been negotiating with the health ministry for months for improved pay and working conditions.

Dr. J. C. Cameron, chairman of the BMA committee which has been carrying on the negotiations, asked the delegates:

"If I go back and say to the Health Ministry that you are insisting on such payment and the answer is again 'no' are you prepared to make this a resignation issue?"

There was a loud chorus of "yes" from the delegates.

Probers Hunt For Bits Of Bomb

100 MILE HOUSE (CP)—An intensive, detailed investigation is under way to find out what caused a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane to explode in flight over this Cariboo town.

Investigators sifting through the wreckage looked for pieces of a bomb.

The quest for the cause of the crash that killed all 52 persons aboard continues on three fronts:

● Police scientists in Vancouver, 170 miles from the crash, are examining pieces of the four-engined DC-6B that was Flight 21 out of Vancouver on Thursday.

● Pathologists at Vancouver are examining bodies, and parts of bodies, to determine whether the massive injuries indicate a specific type of force which might have brought the plane down.

● On the scene, department of transport and RCMP investigators are inspecting every piece of the plane — no matter how small.

Officials said it may be some days before the wreckage is thoroughly picked apart and other matters, such as insurance carried by passengers, are investigated.

INSURANCE LIGHT

One official report indicated insurance bought by passengers and on behalf of passengers was unusually light.

Authorities on the scene said Saturday that a preliminary investigation showed an explosion ripped the tail section from the aircraft, sending both sections 15,000 feet to the forest below.

Two men said they spotted

Explosives On Train

MEAN, Italy (AP)—A bag of high explosives was found Saturday aboard a coach on a train from Munich. Police speculated the charge might have been destined for the Mont Blanc meeting next week of presidents de Gaulle of France and Saragat of Italy.

Injured

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin broke small bone in his back when he fell on stairway outside his home Saturday, but still planned to fly to Paris today to attend a NATO conference.

Ex-Minister Gaining Support

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Senator Garcia Godoy, a wealthy businessman and longtime foreign minister under Juan Bosch, gained support Saturday for the presidency of a provisional Dominican government.

Garcia Godoy was unqualified endorsements from the peace-makers of the Organization of American States and from the rebel constitutionalist forces of Col. Francisco Caamaño Dese.

Scene of barber shop crash, shooting

Car Smashes Shop, Then Bullets Fly

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP)—Battle Ground, Wash., in critical condition with a stomach wound, and Edgar Allen Waser, 20, of La Center, Wash., in serious condition with a wound in the upper leg.

Police held John Frederick Anderson, 20, a sophomore in journalism at Pepperdine College in Los Angeles, for questioning.

Police gave this account: A taxi was called to a Vancouver motel and Mrs. Jennings, whose husband Stanley owns the De Luxe City Cab Co., responded. The rider shot Mrs. Jennings four times and stole the cab.

At Ridgefield, about 10 miles north of Vancouver, the taxi was spotted and a 100-mile-per-hour pursuit by police began.

The cab missed a curve and crashed into the barber shop. The driver jumped out and shot Jones twice with a .22-calibre pistol.

When Morford tried to carry Jones to safety, he was shot in the back as he left the shop. Waser also was wounded as he tried to escape.

Marshall Hal Huffmaster of Battle Ground fired two bullets into the shop where the gunman hid behind the barber chair. The man threw up his hands, kicked out a window and surrendered. Anderson was booked for homicide.

The Men Who Built the Bomb

From Trinity to Remorse

By FRANK CAREY

Fuchs led Congo

WASHINGTON (AP)—Klaus Fuchs, the atomic scientist spy, was also "a model baby-sitter" and sometime canteen leader at the secret birthplace of the A-bomb in the New Mexico mountains.

Maj.-Gen. Leslie Groves, paunchy quarterback of the $2,000,000,000 project to build the bomb, kept a chocolate bar in his safe along with his secret documents—for emergency use if his dieting determination weakened.

Two army officers assigned aboard the cruiser Indianapolis to transport the precious Uranium-235 explosive to Tinian in the Pacific for the assembling of the Hiroshima bomb had orders that, if the ship sank, "they were to save their cargo before any human life . . . the first life raft would go to the U-235."

Dedicated seismographs, designed to record earth-tremors from the world's first atomic bomb test in the New Mexico desert near Alamogordo on July 16, 1945, rode by train from Boston to Albuquerque on soft Pullman berths lest they get damaged.

These and many other side-lights of the historic birth of the bomb are related in a new book, Day of Trinity (published by Atheneum). It records the events leading up to, and including, the code-named "Trinity" test of the first A-bomb. The 26th anniversary of the test occurs Monday.

The book was written by Lansing Lamont, a 35-year-old Washington correspondent for

Campbell's 'Potato Patch'

Jibe Draws Rebuke From Premier Shaw

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Shaw of Prince Edward Island said Saturday Municipal Affairs Minister Daniel Campbell of British Columbia should be pitted on his lack of knowledge of Canada outside his own province.

Mr. Campbell said Friday Prime Minister Pearson's announcement of a $148,000,000 causeway-tunnel-bridge link between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick was a "political boondoggle to a potato patch."

Premier Shaw said the B.C. minister knew little of the needs of other parts of Canada.

"He should come here and meet some of the people and study economic conditions."

Better still, Mr. Campbell should talk to some of the tourists from British Columbia who have enjoyed visits to Prince Edward Island, the premier said.

Mr. Campbell demanded federal aid to subsidize the B.C. ferry system between Vancouver Island and mainland B.C.

Truck-Train Collision Kills Nine

MAXTON, N.C. (AP) — An Atlantic Coast Line Railroad freight train struck a pickup truck carrying a baseball team near this southeastern North Carolina town Saturday, killing nine of the 10 persons in the truck.

The accident occurred at a rural crossing north of Maxton. All the victims, members of a Lumbago Indian baseball team, were believed to be from the Maxton area.

Mangled bodies were strewn over the track. The lone survivor, August Blue, 31, of Maxton, was taken to a nearby Laurinburg hospital in critical condition with head and chest injuries. He was believed to be the driver of the truck.

Stern Warning For Profiteers

SAIGON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky Saturday charged that war profiteers are undermining his government, the ninth since the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963.

The youthful premier, commander of South Viet Nam's Air Force, already has said he will have such persons shot.

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Compulsory military training has been introduced in the Pakistan part of Kashmir, a Pakistani government spokesman said in Rawalpindi Friday.

The spokesman told the national assembly that military training for civilians in villages, schools and colleges has been started to meet the "mounting Indian threat of aggression" in the Pakistan part of the divided state.

Women Toss White Bombs

SAIGON (Reuters) — Female Viet Cong guerrillas hurled white phosphorus grenades at American troops sweeping a section of their "war zone D" jungle stronghold north of Saigon this week, an officer reported Saturday.

Two MiGs Blasted Near China Border

Air Force Makes First Kill

SAIGON (UPI) — Two U.S. air force F4C Phantom jets using air-to-air missiles Saturday shot down two Communist MIG-17 fighters 70 miles from the border of Communist China during the deepest U.S. aerial penetration of North Viet Nam to date.

It was the first "kill" for U.S. Air Force planes since the Korean war. Three MIGs, downed previously over North Viet Nam, were bagged by navy pilots from U.S. seventh fleet carriers.

The dogfight took place 75 miles northwest of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital, during one of 11 missions in the area by American planes. The F4Cs and six air force F105 Thunderchief jets also attacked the Yen Sen ammunition depot and several bridges with rockets and bombs.

ON RADAR — During a morning bombing attack on Yen Sen pilots saw three unidentified MIGs but the Communist planes fled.

A U.S. military spokesman said the 1,200 mile-an-hour F4Cs were flying over at 25,000 feet for the MIGs this afternoon when they detected the enemy MIGs on radar.

The MIGs attacked with cannon fire and the air force planes turned loose their air-to-air rockets. One MIG went "straight down" and the other exploded and dropped through a cloud bank, the spokesman said.

JET ACES — America's newest jet aces later were identified as Capt. Kenneth Holcombe of Detroit, Mich., and Capt. Donald C. Anderson of Fairbanks, Alaska—boarded one plane, and Capt. Thomas R. Roberts of La Grange, Ga., and Capt. Arthur C. Clark of McAllen, Tex., flying the other.

Two air force jets were shot down early this year when MIGs swooped down out of a cloud bank cover and surprised the bomb-laden American planes.

OLD MODELS — The MIG-17 is one of the older models of the Soviet-built jet fighter.

The series began with the MIG-15 and has progressed to the MIG-21.

The Communist planes shot down Saturday presumably were flown by North Vietnamese pilots. It was not known whether they came from the direction of Hanoi or the Chinese border.

At Hanoi

Missile Sites Boosted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five sites for anti-aircraft missiles are being prepared in the vicinity of Hanoi, the capital of North Viet Nam.

This is one more than the figure used by a U.S. state department spokesman last week.

It was learned that the five sites are in position to guard Hanoi from U.S. air attack. The state department also mentioned Haiphong, a major port about 80 miles east of Hanoi, as guarded by such missile sites.

SPOTTED — For the most part, the sites spotted by U.S. reconnaissance aircraft are ranged South of Hanoi, about 15 miles away.

With their alert range of about 35 miles, this gives the city such protection extending close to 40 miles.

U.S. authorities are not concerned about these sites, considering them of minor importance unless a decision is made to strike at Hanoi itself—which is considered unlikely for political reasons.

So far U.S. bombers have come no closer than 40 miles to the North Vietnamese capital in the almost daily raids which began in early February.

It is not certain whether Russians are doing the missile site preparation work, although the assumption is that they are there as they were at similar anti-aircraft missile bases in Cuba.

RISK — It was learned also that the presence of Russian soldiers or technicians at these anti-aircraft missile sites would not save those sites if the United States determined it was necessary to knock them out.

Such a Russian presence would not be a deterrent, as has been supposed by some observers who believe the United States would hesitate to risk a clash with the Soviet Union and thus would avoid killing Russians helping the North Vietnamese.

DON'T SQUEEZE PIMPLES — Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) — America's Mariner-4 space camera is closing for an historic attempt Wednesday to photographically shave a 125-mile-wide swath of mystery from the mottled red face of the planet Mars.

Mariner-4, the world's first interplanetary television station, will go to work in earnest at 8:24 p.m. (EDT) Wednesday when its "eye," wearing a 38-power telescope to see better, opens for the first time.

For 35 minutes thereafter, if all goes well, its field of view will sweep from Northwest to Southeast, taking in the brilliant scenery of a Martian "oasis," three deserts, one of the planet's so-called "seas" and perhaps the fringes of its receding south polar cap.

Mariner-4 was rigged to snap 21 pictures, each about 125 miles wide. Scientists were willing to guarantee that, barring a hitch, they will get at least 17 photographs back to Earth—perhaps including the first good look at the Martian "canals" that have puzzled astronomers for 88 years.

While the dogfight was taking place, six F105 Thunderchiefs dropped a full bomb load on the ammunition dump, destroying five buildings and damaging four others.

FAR NORTH

Then they re-grouped with the F4C fighters and destroyed two bridges 80 and 85 miles northwest of Hanoi. This was farther north than any U.S. planes have flown since the air strikes against North Viet Nam began. The bridges were situated midway between Hanoi and the city of Lao Kay on the border of Communist China on an important highway and railroad running through the Red River Valley which links Hanoi and Red China.

In other air and ground actions, 94 Communist Viet Cong were reported killed.

Two Versions

ON WEDNESDAY, Quebec's Premier Lesage said the federal government had agreed to gradually transfer its jurisdiction over Quebec Eskimos to the province, and according to news dispatches he indicated the final decision in this respect was made at a meeting with Prime Minister Pearson in May.

On the same day, Mr. Pearson denied he had discussed this takeover with the Quebec premier at their "summit" meeting on May 8. The prime minister said they had merely talked about the transfer of an obsolete radar station at Great Whale River from the defence department to the province.

On Thursday, Mr. Pearson said that at the May 8 meeting it was decided that the province would take over normal municipal services at Great Whale River, and the expectation was that this pattern would be followed in other Eskimo communities; also that (although such an agreement had not been reached with Quebec) the federal government was looking forward to a gradual transfer of Eskimo administration to the provinces.

Mr. Lesage's version of this is that "there was an understanding that we would go ahead by stages and that's what we are doing."

So it comes down to the twists and turns of semantics. No agreement, but an understanding. Not discussed in broad terms on the specific occasion of the May 8 meeting, taking Mr. Pearson's word for that; but made effective at that time by a decision on the first step.

And this, as Opposition Leader Diefenbaker says, was "under the table" and concealed from Parliament and the nation for two months.

At the crux of the controversy over the handing over of jurisdiction, desired by Quebec, is the question of self-determination. The great majority of the affected Eskimos (almost entirely English-speaking and Protestant) are said to want to remain under federal rule. Northern Affairs Minister Leung has maintained in the past that they should be given a say; Quebec's Resources Minister Rene Levesque would consult them but takes them under the provincial wing regardless of their wishes.

Mr. Pearson now says that in the stage-by-stage process envisaged, the steps will not be taken without the approval of those concerned; there will be "consultation in the normal sense . . . getting their views."

But does this mean, definitely, that the Eskimos' rights will be upheld; that in the process of whittling rather than chopping away the federal control, they will be able to say yes or no?

Viewing the prime minister's evasive play on the meaning of words at the outset, there are grounds for grave misgivings.

Have They Found Out?

NORTH AMERICAN businessmen who persist in believing that career women pose no great threat to them in their never-ending quest for a seat in the executive suite may have a rude awakening one of these days.

Already women are making a name for themselves not only in the professions but in the higher echelons of commerce and industry. And what is more, they are taking themselves seriously.

An example of the determination of businesswomen to compete with and even beat men at their own jobs is the fact that a large group of them recently accepted a series of "commandments for success" drawn up by a Miss Foxworth who is president of the Advertising Women of New York.

Miss Foxworth's commandments are:

1. Try harder—you need not take second place.
2. Know when to let the men do the talking.
3. Don't try to hide behind your petticoats—they don't conceal so much as they used to.
4. Speak softly and carry no stick save lipstick.
5. Work cheerfully for a woman boss.
6. When success comes, don't get too big for your britches.
7. Watch your language—there may be gentlemen present.
8. Don't match Martinis with the men—a man under the table can still be dangerous.
9. Save your sex-appeal for after five—sex around the office is like alcohol on the highway.

Miss Foxworth's tenth commandment? "Make your own," she says.

Before the superior males in our midst openly laugh about or jeer at these "commandments" they might well be advised to give serious consideration to what they could mean.

These regulations for success could perhaps indicate that women have at last discovered that men are not entirely infallible, or worse, that they have found they can do some jobs—apart from raising children, running a house and completing crossword puzzles—better than some men.

Where all this could lead is a thought enough to make any male shudder—particularly when he wakes up to the realization that there are far more women in the world than men, and recalls (if he will) these words Socrates uttered more than 2,300 years ago: "Once made equal to man, woman becomes his superior."

Farmer's Jeopardy

FARM ACCIDENTS are threatening to top the highway toll in Canada.

This information has stimulated farm safety discussion in Ontario and the prairie provinces, and B.C. authorities would be well advised to contemplate some similar form of educational campaign.

Mr. Ira G. Needles, a former general chairman of the Canadian Highway Safety Council, has warned that "farming is becoming one of Canada's most hazardous occupations."

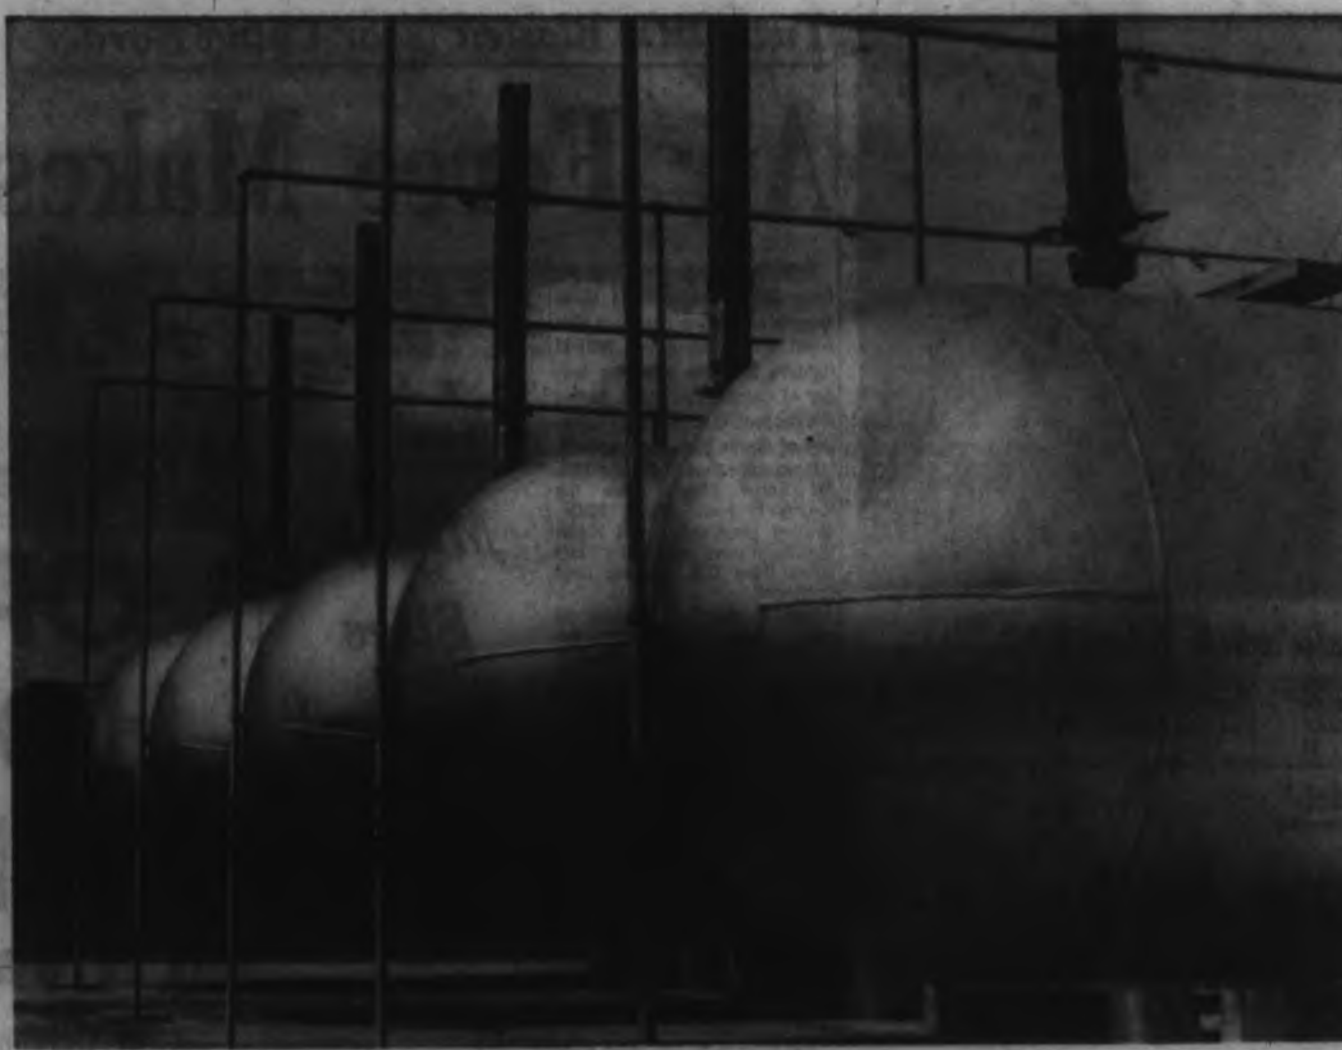

His statistics back up his assertion. More than 120,000 farmers will be involved in accidents, most of them unnecessary, in the current year. Some 32,000 will suffer serious injury. And no fewer than 2,500 will die!

One in every six farm families can expect accidents this year, it is possible to predict.

Why is this? Well, says the Canadian Safety Council, machinery can't think. You don't stop it by yelling "Whoah!" In the old horse-farming days the sagacious animals often were more alert to danger than their drivers. They bolted, true, on occasion. But a runaway horse is not as dangerous potentially as a runaway tractor.

Farmers tend to careless ways when they become familiar with their machinery. That is asking for trouble. They must always be on guard and they should be constantly reminded to pursue this policy.

Maybe their wives could help?

Arms Conference Hope Felled

By HOWARD GREEN

former Secretary of State for External Affairs

IT has now become obvious that the Soviet Union has no intention of agreeing to the American suggestion that the 17-nation Disarmament Committee resume its work at Geneva this month.

Almost a year ago the committee adjourned for the 1964 General Assembly of the United Nations. This was following the usual practice, but in other years the committee commenced its work shortly after the end of the Assembly.

The Americans have been pressing for such action and obviously are anxious to see progress made in disarmament negotiations—or in "arms control" measures as the field might more appropriately be called.

The other NATO members of the committee, Britain, Canada and Italy, have the same aim; and so do the eight unaligned member nations. Only the Warsaw Pact countries are holding back and probably some of them—Poland for example—would like to see the committee functioning. But the Russians have given a firm "nyet."

Why have they taken this stand? I think because of their quarrel with Red China. Week after week the Chinese accuse them of being "soft" against the "imperialists" and strive to undermine them in the Communist world.

This is a challenge the Russians dare not ignore. Hence they are adopting a tough attitude in their dealings with the Western nations and our good way in which this can be done without much danger is by refusing to sit on the disarmament committee.

The situation in Viet Nam is another reason for the lack of co-operation. While they have shown little enthusiasm for getting directly involved in that part of the world the Russians are strongly opposed to the American policy of bombing North Viet Nam. They fear that they would lose face with their Communist allies if they sat with the Americans in the disarmament committee while bombing continues.

Whatever lies behind the stalemate I fear that the 17-nation committee is dead. This is a tragedy for it had made some progress, notably in facilitating the agreements to ban further nuclear tests except those underground and to prohibit the use of outer space for launching weapons of mass destruction.

Canada took a very active part in getting this committee set up and in its earlier deliberations. However when the present government brought nuclear warheads onto Canadian soil leadership on the question of disarmament became impossible for our country.

Other nations I am sure are not impressed by Canada's recent proposals for a curb on nuclear weapons. They are quick to see the hypocrisy in such a move. The tragedy of the position is that the gravest danger facing the world today is the probability of various nations deciding they must acquire these weapons. Preventing such spread is the main hope for the survival of mankind.

Earlier this year the Soviet Union took the initiative in calling a meeting of the Disarmament Commission of the United Nations to which every member nation belongs. The meeting lasted two weeks; much propaganda was put on the record; and the final result was a call for a world conference on disarmament.

Such a conference would include Red China; both West and East Germany would be invited; as well, although no one of the three holds membership in the United Nations.

I expect that eventually some such conference will be held. Many months would be required to organize it and detailed negotiations are impossible among such a large group of nations. On the other hand world attention would be focused on the question by such a conference and this would be of some value.

The 1965 General Assembly which is to open in September may be able to get some action on the question. In any event there are bound to be extensive discussions, and in this way too world-wide opinion may be developed which could result in the nuclear powers deciding that they must reach agreement on some measure of arms control.

However at the present time the prospects for progress in this field are not good. Strong leadership is required, and the United States and the Soviet Union can hardly take the initiative, France and Red China are moving in the opposite direction; only Britain of all the great powers might be able to lead. But she is so closely tied to the United States that it would be difficult for her to do so.

This fact has been made very clear in the last few days by the failure of the Commonwealth Peace Mission for Viet Nam to gain a hearing in the Communist countries.

Possibly the Secretary-General of the United Nations would be followed if he gave leadership but his position is much weaker than that of his predecessor Dag Hammarskjöld; furthermore the United Nations itself is weaker than it was a year ago.

The best group to demand action would be middle powers like Canada, India, the Scandinavian countries, Ireland, Brazil, Mexico, China, Nigeria, Yugoslavia and the United Arab Republic. I hope some of them—including Canada—will undertake the task. Certainly they would be working for the benefit of humanity.

NOTES of the parliamentary reportorial cut . . .

In accepting the resignation of former Justice Minister Guy Favreau with the summer vacation season just getting started, Prime Minister Pearson has managed to spoil just a bit of the holiday fun for an increasing number of political gossamers.

It was just getting to be "in" around these parliamentary parts, when going on vacation, to drop Mr. Favreau a card somewhere along the way.

One of those "Having a wonderful time, wish you were here," kind of cards, signed "Lucien Rivard," the new justice minister just consensually might pass them along to the RCMP or simply toss them into the waste basket.

As the holidays head into full seasonal swing, with Canadians trooping south and Americans north, now would seem to be the propitious time to pass along an expert's word of advice on the fine art of crossing the border with convincing innocence—and that couple of cartons of cigarettes or jug or so of bourbon.

The expert? Why, who else but Revenue Minister Benson, the member of the federal cabinet responsible for the collection of taxes, both income and customs.

Now all the fun is gone out of it, because nobody else in the cabinet—especially Privy Council President George McLeod—who was briefly as acting justice minister—has quite the same sad Bassett bound east of face. And instead of looking as if he might hurt into tears when getting these holiday notes from "Lucien Rivard," the new justice minister just consensually might pass them along to the RCMP or simply toss them into the waste basket.

As the holidays head into full seasonal swing, with Canadians trooping south and Americans north, now would seem to be the propitious time to pass along an expert's word of advice on the fine art of crossing the border with convincing innocence—and that couple of cartons of cigarettes or jug or so of bourbon.

Solution Elusive

Troubles in Aden

By COLIN LEGUM from London

FOR the first time since Britain's Labor government came to office there are signs of deteriorating relations between the Aden nationalist political leadership and the colonial secretary, Mr. Arthur Greenwood.

This development is paralleled by deteriorating relations between the two governments in the area—the South Arabian federal government, dominated by traditionalists, and the Aden state government (an uneasy partnership between the Aden nationalists and the British high commissioners).

The immediate point in dispute is Mr. Greenwood's determination to appoint an international commission to assist in preparations for an independence constitution for South Arabia (which includes Aden State and all the protectorates in the hinterland). Interference has been promised for 1968.

Mr. Greenwood has been trying for almost two months to find suitable nominees for his commission. But, beyond the appointment of a chairman, he has not had much success. Neither the United Nations, through Mr. U Thant, nor the Commonwealth countries have shown any particular desire to become involved in the commission—mainly because it has been threatened with a boycott by the Aden state government.

The UN resolution on the future of the British military base goes only as far as to say that "its early removal is desirable." There is, as yet, no serious demand for the removal of the base from the Aden nationalists. But there is a danger that, if relations between Britain and the Adenis continue to deteriorate, enmity between the nationalists and British soldiers will lead to the base being regarded as a source of hostility.

Churning up and down the river, like any life-long swimmer should be?

Unhappily, however, on the edge of the raft, up to his neck in the Radeau, and beaming contentedly around that big cigar of his.

Then he "cast off" from the raft, looking vaguely like some strange sort of vest-pocket steamboat in human form, and went paddling downstream, sending up puffs of smoke from his still high-and-dry cigar which rode serenely just above the water line, upthrust at an acute angle in his bearing face.

So if you call in on the capital this summer on your holiday travels, and miss the Changing of the Guard on Parliament Hill, be sure to try to catch Paul Martin at Brighton Beach doing his steamboat turn.

With a wink and a grin, he was dispensing travel tips to a small circle of vacation-bound MPs, on how to cross the border, pleasantly and painlessly, on the homeward leg of the holiday excursion.

"Look the customs officer straight in the eye, smile, relax and be nonchalant . . . and for Heaven's sake, stop putting that match in your mouth and trying to light it with your cigarette."

A Vast Jam Bee

From Colonial Files

BEACON HILL PARK'S "staid groves and lofty firs resounded to the merry cries of youth and older folk making merry." 25 years ago, at "a monster free old-time dance and sing-song under the auspices of the civic celebrations committee."

"While hundreds stood and watched, or rested on the benches, dozens of couples, many young and many of them old, performed lively schottisches, eightsome reels, two-steps and old-fashioned waltzes on the turf. . . . When the crowd tired of dancing momentarily, Frank Tupman led communally singing. . . . Members of the girls' drill team collected for Canada's war effort and soon had their money boxes fairly bulging with silver."

At Lake Hill Community Centre, the Victoria Local Council of Women in co-operation with the Red Cross sponsored "a vast jam-making bee."

"Washing and sterilizing the 600 fruit jars occupied most of the morning; jam-making began after lunch and by the end of the afternoon about 80 quarts were cooked, bottled and ready to send off to the storehouses." The bee was to continue.

About 375 Victoria mechanics were expected to have soon for England "where they will be engaged upon the manufacture of munitions of war," 25 years ago.

Tests of the local applicants had been concluded at the E & N Railway shops by a British mission, "and they have shown that in the number of men accepted in proportion to the applications sent in, Victoria will make a better showing than other Canadian centres."

"Diabolism is the possibility of selling the James Bay mudflats for private development were surprised, 75 years ago."

"Ald. Harrison it was who first suggested . . . the idea of selling or filling in the James Bay mudflats. He asserted they were worth $100,000 to the city, and could be sold for that sum, and the bridge relegated to the past. At that time his remarks were received with incredulous comment. Since then two informal offers of much more than the amount named have been made by local speculators. Neither was made in such form that it could be acted upon. . . ."

"To outside capitalists, however, the plan offers considerable inducements, and the enterprising men over the Sound have realized this. Yesterday Ald. Harrison received a letter, in which was contained a proposition to buy the flats for $250,000, the purchasers building a retaining wall and giving a roadway to the city. . . ."

It was a diverse and interesting lot of goods that the Hudson's Bay Company had instructed Daniel Scott and Company to sell at the City Auction Rooms, Commercial Row, Wharf Street, 100 years ago.

Offered were 188 kegs of cut nails, from one to three and one-half inches; 18 iron bedsteads; four cases of Collins' Hartford axes; one case grindstones, rollers and handles; nine cases, about 700 pairs, boots and shoes; an unspecified number of cases of single and double rein bridles, heads and reins, bits, and cotton umbrellas; one Price's patent safe, and also "several handsome bound books, including Wreath of Beauty, British Poets' Gallery, Waverley, Byron, Family Bible, &c., &c."

Mr. Miles Starr

'I've Got Thick Skin'

By FRASER KELLY
From Ottawa

THIS is the story of a man who rode to power on a second-hand bicycle and was sworn into the federal cabinet with a cigarette butt in his pocket.

It is also the story of a shrewd, successful politician who has served notice he intends to fight for the national leadership of the Conservative Party.

Michael Starr is no ordinary politician. The Conservative House leader has qualities which set him apart from the other four men being touted as possible successors to Mr. John Diefenbaker.

The provincial premiers, Roblin of Manitoba and Stanfield of Nova Scotia and the two former federal ministers, E. Davis Fulton and George Hees, are in varying degrees, urbane articulate and sophisticated.

Unlike the others, Starr has built his career without the benefit of money, influence or formal schooling. Yet he became the first Canadian of Ukrainian descent to hold a cabinet post in this country. (He was labor minister in the Diefenbaker years.) Now, as caucus chairman and Tory House leader, he still wields real power.

Michael Starr was born in Copper Cliff, Ont., Nov. 14, 1910. He was the oldest of six children in a poor family. He learned hard work and frugality very young, and both have stayed with him.

His thrift was illustrated on a hot June day in 1957 as he walked up the steps on Parliament Hill on his way to be sworn as labor minister.

Reporters saw him pause, sniff out his half-cigarette and put it into his pocket. When he left the buildings a short time later he took out the butt and lit up again.

Mr. Starr had to quit school at 15 to help support his family. He sweated as a $3-a-week printer's devil and as a picture framer for 18 cents an hour.

By the time he was 17, financial pressures on his family had eased, so he enrolled at a commercial school. His natural ability and capacity for hard work paid off. He averaged 80 per cent in 13 subjects in the single year.

Armed with his commercial diploma, he joined an Ottawa sheet metal firm where he rose steadily to manager of special sales. But he had been bitten by the political bug.

Three times he ran and lost, before he was elected alderman in Ottawa. During the winning campaign he gathered votes by peddling over the city's bumpy roads on a second-hand bicycle.

He became mayor of the motor city in 1948. And held the job until 1952. In 1951 he made an unsuccessful bid for a seat in the Ontario legislature. Six months later he was elected to the House of Commons in a by-election in Ontario riding.

He has won every federal election since, each with a substantial majority. In 1963, he won with a 1,000 vote margin, that bucking a Liberal tide that swept through most of urban Ontario.

The same steady resolve and efficiency plus enormous capacity for work characterized his term as labor minister. Time and time again—such as during the railway labor dispute in 1956—he demonstrated a capacity for conciliation.

It is as a conciliatory, middle-of-the-road candidate with proven political judgment that Mr. Starr will campaign for the Tory leadership.

Shortly after he announced his decision to oppose Mr. Fulton and Mr. Hees, Mr. Starr had a chat with Mr. Diefenbaker. The chief warned him the "bushes would now be out" for him.

The affable, 150-pound Starr, who is built like a football full-back, laughed and replied: "I've got a thick skin."

He has always enjoyed a good relationship with Mr. Diefenbaker, who last April chose him as his Commons seat-mate. When Mr. Diefenbaker is away, he is the party's official spokesman.

With rare exception—such as when a cabinet minister gives him a flip answer—he is an unperturbed, no-nonsense debater. He is quick to his feet to help his colleagues. But he lacks the capacity to strike for the jugular vein in heavy going.

Mr. Starr can be expected to win some support in Western Canada where the party has an active and vocal ethnic wing of Diefenbaker loyalists. He is well-liked by most other members of the caucus.

But the race to replace Mr. Diefenbaker, if and when he resigns or is ousted, will not be a popularity contest. Delegates will be looking for a leader who can win a general election.

Mr. Starr realizes his lack of a formal education will hurt him, particularly with party intellectuals.

"In an age demanding more and more education, Mr. Starr is like the errand boy who becomes company president. And that type is rapidly disappearing."

Subsidy or No Subsidy Ferry Fare Should Be Cut

By IAN STREET
If there's logic to Premier Bennett's latest pronouncement on ferry fares then it is of his ferry fares to Vancouver Island, amounted to $308,000, just to keep fares at the present level. He was asked: Tolls have been removed from bridges and tunnels so why not ferries?

His answer went something like this:

On the highway you, the driver, did the driving. On the ferries you put your car aboard and somebody else does the driving for you until your car rolls off at the other end. You are being taken elsewhere.

So, the premier says, the government action in wiping out highway tolls at a cost to the provincial treasury of $66,500,000 does not set a precedent.

I might add this kind of political hair-splitting doesn't seem to bother B.C. when it is trying to win federal operating subsidies for the ferry system.

The same point has been raised—with the same singular lack of success—on the Second Narrows Bridge which should qualify for Trans-Canada Highway subsidies but hasn't.

The ferry system, although given a healthy boost by the short-lived federal shipbuilding grants, still is without federal operating grants—unlike the ferries in service on the east coast.

Mr. Pearson's announcement only this week that Ottawa will spend $148,000,000 on a nine-mile causeway-bridge-tunnel link to Prince Edward Island has added fuel to the flames of this raging controversy.

The premier himself, for the moment anyway, is letting his minister's carry the ball. But there's no doubt he'll have plenty to say about the unfair treatment being meted out to B.C.

In fact, the government position on this matter of ferry fees, at present, could be boiled down this way: the fares could be lowered if the federal government will kick through with a sizable subsidy.

Note, please, the use of that word "could." It doesn't follow, even if the subsidy was forthcoming, that fares would be significantly lowered.

Mr. Bennett says—and no one will deny this—that the government ferries have made Vancouver Island what it is today. You have only to look around to see the tangible results of closer communication with the mainland.

A few will argue when the premier adds that if the government had not acted back in 1952 the service today would have been not one-quarter as good with fares probably twice as high as the present rates.

But this doesn't affect the basic fact that fares are not cheap.

The $14 return charge for car and driver is enough to discourage taking cars aboard to the point where the ferry authority has had to enlarge its parking facilities and add a parking fee at the four main terminals.

Perhaps this is what the premier is alluding to when he says someone does the driving on the ferries. The government, in any case, doesn't lose much because through Pacific Stage Lines it is a partner in the inter-city bus service.

But the ferries could gain a considerable amount of revenue, I suggest, and still handle business comfortably by dropping the $2 additional fare each way for drivers. Just make it $5 per crossing for car and driver. It's worth a try and it would make people like me even happier with the ferry service.

Let's Open Our Homes And Hearts to Tourists

By A. M. MURPHY

When visitors say: "They really do roll the sidewalks up at night, don't they?" Victorians don't really resent it. With a sort of inverse pride, we admit that there's not much doing at night and, for that matter, not a great deal, in the way of events, to entertain tourists during daylight hours.

We provide the finest climate and some of the most magnificent scenery in the world, we say, and if that isn't enough we're sorry. The attitude is: it's good enough for us so it should be good enough for you. I'm not sure that I, too, don't occasionally subscribe to that attitude, but the fact remains that the tourist industry is one of our biggest and, like it or not, we have to entertain these people so that they will come back and leave their money here.

CITY HALL COMMENT

One thing that could be done and which would, I think, please visitors, is to invite them into our homes or show them the area and the many delightful places we know which they never would find—a sort of people-to-people program.

An agency could be set up at which local people could leave their names and to which visitors could apply. Enough information would be provided so that suitable arrangements could be made.

A doctor, for example, would not be asked to entertain someone who believes in state medicine. He would be supplied with another doctor or professional person who was likely to agree with his own views.

Categories would be elastic and no one would be obliged to stay within them. I can even conceive of some Victorians deliberately choosing people who might broaden their outlook!

I have talked to many Americans about this idea and failed to find one who did not think it good. They want to meet the people of the area they visit. And, after they run the gamut of hucksters along the Causeway, it might be well if their impressions of our beautiful district are corrected.

We have so much to give. We should be proud of our community and eager to show it off, particularly to such receptive guests as are most of our visitors.

The idea is not unique. Several European countries, with Denmark leading the way, have adopted plans whereby the visitor may visit people of similar tastes and occupations if and when he chooses.

True friendships are formed and the hosts get more out of it than their guests.

Efficient Cardin Could Be Ace In Pearson Deck

By FRANK KELLY, from Ottawa
Special to the Colonist

Lucien Cardin is a quiet, efficient administrator who could become the ace in Prime Minister Pearson's recent cabinet shuffle.

The 46-year-old justice minister has spent most of his career in the wings of Canada's political playhouse. Suddenly, he's been thrust front and centre where the glare of the public spotlight will magnify any weaknesses.

In "Justice" you're either a star or a flop, there's no middle ground.

The betting here is that Cardin will make the grade. If he does he will instantly become a tremendous force in the Quebec wing of the Liberal party.

It's an unwritten rule in federal politics that Quebec must be kept in the inner circles of cabinet. That means a "French Canadian" must hold one of three posts—Justice, Finance or External Affairs.

When he was prime minister, John Diefenbaker fought, or ignored, the rule, and he has been damned in Quebec ever since. Pearson has lived by this rule. When Guy Favreau resigned as justice minister he had lost his Quebec member of the inner circle.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and Finance Minister Walter Gordon are virtually unshakable in their portfolios.

That left Justice, and Lucien Cardin was one of the very few in the cabinet who had the qualifications to hold the post. Equally important at this time in federal politics, his career is completely untarnished by scandal.

He has held two cabinet posts, public works and associate defence. Both are unspectacular, leaving their ministers relatively little known.

But both require excellent administrators to handle enormous quantities of red tape and paperwork. By all accounts Cardin served well in both departments.

Experts give him much of the credit for administering the very difficult early days of the program to integrate Canada's armed forces.

As associate defence minister he worked under the shadow of the more dramatic Paul Hellyer who has received most of the glory.

But there is no doubt Prime Minister Pearson recognized the job he was doing. Twice he offered Cardin a separate cabinet post. Each time Cardin refused because he felt his job was incomplete.

Cardin was first elected to the Commons as member for Richelieu-Verchères (Montreal area) in a bye-election in 1952. He has been re-elected ever since with heavy majorities.

Shortly after he was elected he was appointed as parliamentary assistant to Pearson, who was then external affairs minister.

He served as a Canadian delegate to the United Nations General Assembly and the United Nations Economic and Social Committee.

He was born of Canadian parents in Rhode Island, Connecticut. When he was 11 years his parents moved back to St. Louis, Quebec.

He studied classics at Loyola University. He served in the North Atlantic on Canadian corvettes from 1942 to 1945.

Lucien Cardin

When he retired in 1945, worked for two years in his father's foundry, then earned his law degree. He only practised for 18 months before he was elected to the Commons.

Thus his background is far different from that of his predecessor Guy Favreau who entered politics after having established himself as an outstanding criminal lawyer.

Whereas he undoubtedly lacks Favreau's legal experience, Cardin has two distinct advantages. He has much more administrative ability and he is also much more fluently bilingual consequently less likely to be caught off guard in the Commons.

Until now Cardin has chosen to speak in the Commons as little as possible. But when he did speak he was heard. He will undoubtedly be on his feet much more often when the House reconvenes in September. As the opposition let's fly on the Dorion report.

The Commons, and the Canadian public, will know then whether Pearson's latest shuffle produced an ace, or a joker.

Immediate Elections Demanded

HULL, England (AP)—Sir Alec Douglas Home, former Conservative prime minister, has called on Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson to call immediate new national elections "for the good of the country."

Sir Alec rejected Wilson's recent declaration that the country didn't want new elections and that the Labor government would carry on with its slender Parliamentary majority.

The Conservative party leader said he was happy that his opposition forces defeated the government in three House of Commons tests last week and added:

"The country is now in the hands of a weak government that cannot govern, of a cabinet that is disoriented and an administration whose policies have been rejected by left, right and centre... For the good of the country the prime minister should now call a general election."

President Acts As Own Ombudsman

By BENEDICTO S. DAVID from Manila

In most countries of the world, particularly in Asia, the chief of state is accessible to a chosen few, certainly not to the average citizen.

In this respect, the Philippines is the exception. The president is available to the average citizen on what has been called "Common Man's Day."

On Fridays, whenever the president is in town, anyone can line up at Malacanang Palace to have a few seconds to a couple of minutes with the president.

President Diosdado Macapagal receives his callers—at times for seven to 10 hours at a stretch. He has a squad of assistants, plus a lot of security men, attending him as he talks to the people directly.

Those who see him usually have some favor to ask. They have no jobs, they say, and the president directs one of his aides to write out a recommendation to a private firm.

Other callers have complaints about the Philippine constabulary contingent assigned to their home town. Others complain about mayors, governors, judges or even clerks.

Through it all, President Macapagal listens patiently. Throughout Common Man's Day, the palace staff is kept busy for the president receives anywhere from 1,500 to 7,000 people, depending on the length of time needed to listen to their problems and assign men to solve those problems.

Macapagal decided that to avoid the pitfall of having all his information filtered through aides, he should maintain a permanent channel of communication with the people. And thus, Common Man's Day was set up.

Seven Killed In Explosion

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A pre-dawn explosion killed seven persons and gravely injured four when two freight trains—one carrying crude oil—collided near Malatya province, press reports said Saturday.

The impact blew up oil tanks, spreading flames onto the derailed boxcars and causing considerable damage, the reports said, adding that those killed included engineers and workmen on both trains.

Italy Nicholson will meet President Stork, Italy's foreign affairs undersecretary for emigration, and inspect Canadian immigration offices in this country.

OTTAWA — Mr. Henry List, British high commissioner, and Lady List have returned to Britain on leave for the summer. They are expected to return to Ottawa in September.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore buttoned up on the birthday of the prophet Mohammed which last year triggered Chinese-Malay riots that killed 23 persons. Streets were deserted and most shops were closed and shuttered.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The case of unemployed bartender William Schnurr, 27, charged with murdering a Saskatchewan-born woman and carrying her body for three months in the trunk of his car, has been sent to Superior Court. Schnurr is accused of strangling Sylvia Lynn Pithers, 24, formerly of Preeceville, Sask., a barmaid in the Anaheim bar where Schnurr worked.

Ex-Mental Patient Suspected

Hope Fades for Denise As Kidnapper Hunted

By CLARENCE JOHNSON

KANSAS CITY (AP)—It was just a week ago Saturday that the Clinton family of neighboring Independence, Mo., returned from a happy vacation in California.

Russell, his wife, Betty, and their two daughters, Denise, 9, and Diana, 6, told friends and relatives about the many things they have seen. For Russell it was a restful break in his job as the service manager for an automobile company.

Now Denise—blue-eyed, red-haired, with freckles across her nose, is missing.

KIDNAPPED — She was kidnapped last Thursday morning by a man who held up her grandparents at a motel they operate.

An intensive search of the wooded area around the motel and a check-out of many tips have failed to uncover any clues. There has been no response to pleas on television by Betty Clinton for the safe return of her daughter.

As hope dims, the FBI is searching for Robert Lee Hays, 32, a former mental patient, whose picture was described by the grandparents as resembling the kidnapper.

Denise was spending last Wednesday night with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chelcie Reynolds.

The couple has 15 grandchildren, who take turns visiting with them. Last Wednesday night, Denise was taking her turn—just an overnight stay. She was sleeping in a room just off the lobby. The Reynolds were in an adjoining room.

LOBBY BUZZER

About 2 a.m., Mrs. Reynolds heard the lobby buzzer and got up to admit a tall, dark-haired man about 30 years old, who asked for a single room, then drew a revolver and announced:

"This is a holdup."

As he left, the bandit shoved the gun next to Reynolds' face and warned: "Don't make any funny moves or I'll kill you."

A few minutes after they heard the front door click shut, the couple freed themselves and called police.

Then came the shock. Mrs. Reynolds looked into the adjoining room and saw Denise was gone.

MOST LIKE MAN

The distraught grandparents have looked at many pictures of suspects.

After being shown one of Hays, Mrs. Reynolds said: "I have looked at a lot of photographs but this one looks more like the man than any of the others."

Hays was identified several years ago as the man who broke into nine Kansas City apartments. But charges against him were dismissed later so he could be sent to a hospital for psychiatric care. He was released from a state hospital in February 1964.

Hays also has been sought recently on a federal warrant charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution on a robbery charge in Topeka, Kan.

Dr. Zhivago Cast Fits Characters

HOLLYWOOD (CNS)—Film-an epic novel such as Doctor Zhivago presents difficulties, particularly with the vast array of characters involved, all bearing names that can only add confusion to Western ears.

But it is this very obstacle which will serve as a shield, claims David Lean, who is now directing the production of Doctor Zhivago.

"I can take comfort in the fact that, like War and Peace, a good many more people are aware of Boris Pasternak's book than have read it," Lean commented.

Lean said that his first reaction as he moved deeper into Pasternak's involved plot was to decide definitely what Dr. Zhivago would not be on screen.

"It is not a political story and it cannot be dramatized as such," he said. "Therefore the film will not be anti-communist or pro-communist."

"My belief is that Pasternak was trying to prove in his book that the relief of the suffering of a human being is worth more than the results of a revolution which produces such suffering. Our film should approach the subject with the same detachment that Pasternak exhibits in his novel."

The fact that Dr. Zhivago was banned in Russia and that the author was not allowed to accept his Nobel Prize is a tragedy, Lean said, but the politics behind these events should not be confused with the contents of the novel.

"It took us 12 weeks to hammer out the story line and almost a year after that to shape the characters to fit Pasternak's interpretation of them," Lean said.

"The story doesn't have just two or three central characters. It has several of almost equal importance. It was no simple matter to devise the framework which would quickly establish them in their proper relationship and keep them that way."

over the 30 years of events in which they were involved."

Lean said that his major function came next, casting. "I was aware that it would be a grave error to alter the story line or to change any character to fit a particular star," he said. "Our greatest concern was to fit the actors to the characters—not the other way around."

Lean's selections included Omar Sharif in the title role, Geraldine Chaplin as his young wife, Julie Christie as a romantic interest, Alec Guinness as a half-brother and Slobodan McKenna and Ralph Richardson as Khrushchev and Stalin respectively.

Both girls are Hayley Mills—separated by six years. At left is how she looked when she made her major film debut in Pollyanna when she was 12. Now a grown-up 18, right, Hayley is starring in another Disney film, That Darn Cat, an off-beat comedy-thriller, due for release this year.

Dance Bands Return

Beat Music Craze On Way Out in U.K.

LONDON (AP)—Britain's big beat bubble—infused to gigantic proportions by the Beatles—appears to be near the bursting point.

New Board of Trade figures show the sale of pop music records brought in £2,067,000 (£2,011,000) in April last year. In April this year it sagged to £1,543,000.

Public dance halls, of which Britain has thousands, are switching from pop to traditional dance bands. A big dance hall in nearby County Kent said Saturday night attendance has dropped to 500 and lower from 1,000.

"That's caused us to drop pop," said a spokesman. "We are employing no more beat groups—at least for a while."

The British Broadcasting Corp., said it is bringing in a 20-piece band with strings beginning next Monday to play on its pop show, Gadszooks.

Twelfth Night As He Likes It

By PATRICK O'NEILL

Sir Tyrone Guthrie's Shakespearean interpretations are no more. So says Richard Digby Day, the young director imported from England to produce Twelfth Night at University of Victoria's summer festival this year.

"The modernized versions of Shakespeare have no sense of period at all, and I think that's wrong," he commented.

Guthrie, regarded by many as the world's foremost stage director, has also founded theatres, and developed schools of interpretation of great playwrights such as Shakespeare and Chekhov.

CONTEXT OF AGE

"I think it's important that Shakespeare should be seen in the context of his age," said 23-year-old Digby Day.

His witty summation of the works of Guthrie, who founded Stratford, Ontario's festival, was: A good director of bad plays, and a bad director of good plays.

Digby Day said he felt the modern-dress Hamlet recently produced on Broadway is all right "times in awhile."

He believes Richard Burton is a wonderful actor, and "it's a pity he wasted so much time in the films."

Would Digby like to direct a film?

"I might like to try it. I like some films very much, like Tom Jones. There are some books I'd like to do for films, like Jane Austen's work."

ENGLISH FLAVOR

What can Victoria expect from Twelfth Night?

"I think since I was brought from England, I should give the play a very English flavor."

He said Twelfth Night carries with it a very special brand of English humor.

"Except for the clowns, it's very gentle humor."

He said most productions on this continent, including what he heard about Seattle Repertory's presentation, lean too heavily on the clowns in the play.

"I want to put the emphasis back on the main plot," he said.

Digby Day

"I think a play is only worth doing if it has some kind of meaning for today. If you mess around with these plays, it's a waste of time doing them."

He said when a director like Guthrie alters the costumes, he has to start altering the text because the words invariably refer to what is worn.

"Ideally, Julius Caesar should be done in Elizabethan costume. The people in the play aren't Romans, they're just the Elizabethan conception of Romans."

Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in May, 1963.

Since then he has done such diverse productions as Arms and the Man, Sir Thomas More, Moliere's The Scoundrel Scopin, and Verdi's The Masked Ball for Sadler's Wells. And he worked for a week with Guthrie.

"He's a great man. While I disagreed with everything he did, I could see just why he did it, his reasons."

Carl Hare, head of the English department at the university, is directing A Man for All Seasons, by Robert Bolt.

IN KEEPING

"These plays were chosen because with our new theatre, we need small casts for the small stage. Also, they are in keeping with the renaissance theme, both as the renaissance looked to people of that time, and how it looks today."

The new stage has many playing areas and levels.

Work crews are pounding at the seats and stage, to get them ready for the opening at the end of July.

Mr. Hare said one reason why not many local university students are involved in the productions this year, aside from the small casts in the plays, is the very low fellowship rate.

OTHER REASONS

"Most university students can't work for that. Some we can't get hold of because they have gone out of town for the summer, others just aren't suitable."

He said A Man for All Seasons has been popular in North America because it deals with the problem of integrity.

"The play shows a man who is killed because he refuses to depart from his central focus."

"More is a touchstone for everyone around him. They judge themselves in terms of his actions."

He said the new theatre is thrust stage, as opposed to the picture-frame stage often used for A Man for All Seasons. It will bring the audience into the moral conflicts of the play, and involve everyone in the problem of integrity.

Ottawa Talks Hot Items on Agenda

By FRASER KELLY
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

"This has been one of the busiest weeks ever," said Jim Coutts, Prime Minister Pearson's apple-cheeked appointments secretary.

"If the House had been in session, it would have been frantic."

Ottawa's harassed press corps certainly agreed. The prime minister's office dished out strong, front page news every day.

OPEN MONDAY

Mr. Pearson applied the scalpel to two Quebec members, Guy Rouleau, and Yvon Dupuis; he shuffled his cabinet; fought with Quebec Premier Lesage over Eskimos; tackled increasingly belligerent questions from newsmen in two press conferences; and prepared himself for the federal-provincial conference which opens Monday afternoon.

Coutts said Mr. Pearson has been in his office every morning by 8:30 and he has worked through most days until 6 or 7 p.m.

POURING OVER PAPERS

He spent all day Wednesday (except for time out for his news conference) in cabinet which devoted about 80 per cent of its time on federal provincial relations. Between meetings and interviews, Pearson has been pouring over work papers supplied by staff on the various problems to be discussed at the conference.

Federal authorities feel the coming conference could be the most important in years. They expect it to do much to draw the lines of responsibility between Ottawa and the provinces.

The first item comes under the general heading of social security. Two main points are to be discussed: The Canada Assistance Plan and medicare. PLAN APPROVED Developed by the federal government, the C.A.P. was put before the provincial welfare ministers last April. The basic plan was approved in principle, no federal authorities don't predict any major explosion.

They're not so confident, although far more secretive, about medicare. The whole health department has been sworn to secrecy about the sort of plan health and welfare minister Judy LaMarsh will put before the provinces.

The second general heading is economic development. It is here that the federal government will likely announce more of its war on poverty. The provinces will be asked to put forward their regional programs.

PROGRAM REPORT

The tax structure committee will give progress report during the conference and this will involve some discussion of shared cost programs.

Manitoba and Alberta have had transportation inserted as the fourth item for discussion. The whole thorny problem of rail line abandonments could be aired.

The fifth item, inland water resources, was placed on the agenda at the request of Mr. Roberts. He is acutely interested in conservation of inland water supplies and maintenance of lake levels.

ORGANIZED CRIME

Sixth item — organized crime — could turn out to be the most spectacular of all — at least if Mr. Pearson has his way. It was put on the agenda at his request — well before the results of the Dorion probe were known. There is expected to be a general discussion how the provinces can co-operate with the federal government to improve the nation's crime protection network.

Mr. Pearson was deeply moved by the evidence in the Dorion report that the tentacles of organized crime are reaching into government.

TARNISHED IMAGE

And this item on the agenda has loomed much larger in Pearson's mind since the Dorion report. It seems quite possible Mr. Pearson will use it to make some announcements that will polish his badly-tarnished image.

The last item on the agenda is "other business." Quebec's Lesage and Nova Scotia's Stanfield have both indicated they will raise the question of offshore mineral rights. Premier Bennett, of course, is equally interested. And although he hasn't said so, so is Mr. Roberts.

The federal government is expected to take the stand that nothing should be discussed until the B.C. court case is settled. But it expects some major grandstanding, particularly from Mr. Lesage.

WILDLIFE PROGRAM

Also under "other business" and at the request of the federal government, the conference will discuss a national conservation and wildlife program.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon's people are not expecting

Two are invited to submit questions on insurance and other matters for inclusion in this column. The single of each question is kept strictly secret.

Q—Is there any kind of Third Party Liability insurance to cover damage caused by the use of my outboard motor boat?

A—Yes. A Personal Liability policy is available which covers bodily injury and property damage to others caused by the ownership and use of a motorboat. This policy applies not only while the boat is in the water, but also while being moved or towed on land. In most cases the policy can be easily added to your existing fire insurance policy.

AHL Sends Six Teams

Six American Hockey League clubs will play Victoria Maple Leafs at Memorial Arena next season under the new 72-game interlocking AHL-Western Hockey League schedule.

General manager Buck Houle of the Leafs released the dates and clubs last night.

First AHL visitors will be Cleveland Barons, here Oct. 30. Then it's Springfield Indians Dec. 1, Hershey Bears Dec. 11, Providence Reds Jan. 15, Rochester Americans Feb. 20 and Buffalo March 30.

The Springfield and Buffalo games fall on Wednesday, all others on Saturday.

Leafs themselves will make one swing through the AHL after August.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

COURTENAY—With few worries about a defence which last season yielded but 168 points in 16 league games and figures to be at least as good this year, the accent at the training camp of the B.C. Lions would appear to be on the improvement of an offence which last year stuttered on occasion.

It may have stuttered but Frank Johnston, the Notre Dame alumnus who lives football every hour at his job as offence coach gets his Irish up when he recalls how often he read the word "inept" last season.

"How could they say that?" he asked in continuing bewilderment as he mustered his defence of the offence.

And he made a good case. He pointed out that the Lions scored 328 points in league play, a total only 24 points less than marked up by Calgary's offence-minded Stampede, who led the Western Football Conference in the number of points scored.

"We got the job done," he said, referring to the fact the Lions were beaten only twice in league play, and, perhaps, inferring that the Lion attack was based on the play of the defence team. With the Lions almost always able to stop the opposing attack, the offence club had little need to gamble on offence.

And Johnston could do little more than snort about last season's allegations that Willie Fleming was not quite The Wisp of old.

"That's ridiculous," he said as he headed for his briefcase and figures that Fleming had contributed something like 1,250 yards to the B.C. attack last season. And that's as far as he would go.

"You don't have to defend Willie," he growled, closing off discussion about last season and moving on to the more important item of what can be expected in 1965.

"We have two problems," he said. "Number one is finding a right tackle to replace Ronnie Dennis and number two is finding a left halfback to replace Ron Morris, who appears to be taking over from By Bailey on defence."

Johnston was optimistic that both problems can be resolved although not denying that the loss of Dennis' holler-guy leadership couldn't be taken lightly.

Holdover Gary Schwertfeger and import-rookie George Roby are arguing about who is to be Dennis' replacement. Because of his experience, Schwertfeger may have the edge at the moment but it is far from decided.

"We know Schwertfeger is a proven CFL centre and he has all the equipment to make it as a tackle," Johnston said. But he by no means discounted the possibilities of Roby.

Only 22 years old, Roby weighs in at 280 pounds and has shown exceptionally good straight-ahead speed for his size. If he can measure up in combat conditions and pick up his blocking assignments quickly, Schwertfeger could have a real tussle on his hands.

And, Johnston pointed out, the Lions have two other things going for them in an effort to compensate for the loss of Dennis. They are named Ken Sugarman and Roy Shatzko.

Sugarman, a 230-pound tackle, was a late out of the Baltimore Colts of the NFL last year, joined the Lions after the CFL season started and went on to becoming an outstanding addition.

"Sugarman," Johnston says, "is already one of the best offence tackles in Canada. He should be better this season, and we have him from the start."

Shatzko, evidence at hand indicates, is one of those things that happen when things are going good for a club.

A rookie guard who was drafted from UBC by Calgary Stampede, Shatzko has been a pleasant surprise and is odd-one to grab one of the two Canadian positions open on the B.C. roster.

"We got him from Calgary for a draft choice," Johnston grinned.

Looming as Morris' likely replacement as the left-halfback is a fellow who could make the B.C. attack considerably more potent. That would be Amos Bullocks, 200-pounder who came to the Lions from Dallas of the NFL as part payment for lineman Bill Frank.

Bullocks, 26 years old and a proven pro, is almost in the enviable position of having to play himself out of employment. He sat out last season because of an attack of hepatitis but appears fully recovered and each drill, after a slow start, indicates he is regaining the form which made him a fine NFL runner. If he does come all the way back, the Lions will have themselves, at last, a real running threat to augment Fleming.

Challenging Bullocks for the halfback spot are Tom Larscheid, trying a comeback after missing a full season, and part of another to get his knees repaired and not to be discounted, and newcomer Dewey Lincoln and holdover Lou Holland.

And one might even add Morris to the list. Should coaches not be satisfied with any of the halfback candidates or have their thinking changed by injury, Morris could be moved back on offence if the camp uncovers a new calibre defence back. And Ernest "Pokey" Allen, former Utah State quarterback, has shown a promise in the defence backfield which is to earn him a really good look.

Final decisions are yet to be made on moves designed to solve problems but there was no impression that he was worried as he ticked off his pluses—Sugarman from the start, the good chance that Shatzko will help, the promise wrapped up in Bullocks, a lighter and perhaps quicker Bob Swift who at 21 is already an established halfback and is going to be a better blocker as a sophomore. And the fellows like Joe Kapp, Fleming, Sonny Homer, Mack Burton and Tom Hinton. Johnston couldn't pass up a special mention for Hinton.

"The best lineman in Canadian football," he said of the naturalized 29-year-old guard. "Having him on your side is something."

It all added up to something quite different than inept, and it came from a fellow who crosses his fingers, touches wood and shudders visibly if someone mentions "injury." Johnston was plausible in the role of an unworried worrier.

Warm Up Ambulance

Jarring collision between San Francisco's Willie Mays and Philadelphia catcher Pat Corrales as Mays scores in first inning leaves both sprawled in dust (below). Mays walked off, Corrales was carried off on stretcher, and both were taken to hospital for X-rays. Mays was released, but Corrales was detained for further treatment.—(AP)

'Film' Quarterback Stays in Reserve

Colonist Sports Editor

COURTENAY—Two of the more interesting stories in the training camp of the B.C. Lions are wrapped up in Mel Melin, a quarterback starting his fourth season with the club who has seen little action outside the projection room, and Tom Larscheid, a scrappy, quick, pass-catching halfback trying to make it back after injury to both knees forced him out of action in 1963.

Melin, former Washington State University passing star, is apparently assured of his job and no one who knows Larscheid can safely say that he can't accomplish some thing which may seem unlikely.

FOOTBALL LUXURY? When the Canadian Football League sliced each club's import quota to 14 from 15, there was a prevailing thought that a standby quarterback who has to wait for an injury to Joe Kapp to get his chance to play might be a luxury the Lions couldn't afford.

Rawlings, Transport Use Heavy Artillery

Baseball League action at Royal Athletic Park, as Rawlings dumped Independents, 12-4, in the opener and Transporta downed Chalmers, 13-5, in the nightcap.

George Brice slammed a two-run homer in the fourth inning to snap a 2-2 tie and launch Rawlings on a scoring spree that saw them notch at least one run per frame from the sixth inning onwards, including a four-run burst in the seventh.

Two of the four runs came on Larry Montgomery's single. The other two were unearned, one scoring on an Independent's miscue and one when Frank Lizette was hit by a pitched ball with bases loaded.

In the final game, Transporta erupted with a nine-run burst in the second inning and a four-run spurt in the fourth, powered by John Balloch who drove in four runs.

Al Foster drove in two and Keith Dagg and Art Worth both singled for one.

Yankees Defeat Twins But Good Lead Intact

New York Yankees, beaten 4-1 in the opening game, got a grand-slam homer from Clete Boyer last night and dumped Minnesota Twins, 3-4, to snap their American League winning streak at eight games.

However the Twins built their league lead to four games despite the loss, since second-place Cleveland, ran into a hot Los Angeles club and lost, 1-0, to the Angels.

For a change, Cincinnati and Los Angeles didn't swap places at the top of the National League as they've been doing all week. Cincinnati last night won 5-3 over Milwaukee Braves.

Juan Marichal of San Francisco won his 14th for the Giants in masterful fashion, beating Philadelphia Phillies, 7-0, with its half-game lead with a 9-8 win over Milwaukee Braves.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the major leagues, there was much rejoicing in Kansas City.

The Athletics won their first in nine games, 4-3, from Detroit Tigers. Mike Herzberger led off the ninth with a triple and scored the winning run on Rene Lachemann's deep fly ball.

Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles. They won the opener 6-4 as ex-Orioles Ron Hansen drove in three runs with a homer and a single, but lost the night game, 5-3.

Goat in that game was left fielder Joe Hicks, who lost two routine fly balls to let in four runs.

a two-hitter. It was his seventh shutout.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the major leagues, there was much rejoicing in Kansas City. The Athletics won their first in nine games, 4-3, from Detroit Tigers. Mike Herzberger led off the ninth with a triple and scored the winning run on Rene Lachemann's deep fly ball.

Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles. They won the opener 6-4 as ex-Orioles Ron Hansen drove in three runs with a homer and a single, but lost the night game, 5-3.

Goat in that game was left fielder Joe Hicks, who lost two routine fly balls to let in four runs.

Water Main Serves Esquimalt 77 Years

By JIM BRAHAN

Victorians can be assured full value has been received from the water main now being replaced on Esquimalt Road between Catherine and Dominion Road.

Workers lay new 12-inch water main on Esquimalt Road.

The seven-inch cast iron pipe, made in England and shipped to Victoria by sailing vessel via Cape Horn, was laid down in 1888 as part of the system belonging to the old Esquimalt Water Works.

It is one of the oldest water lines in the city and is being replaced with 2,800 feet of new 12-inch main, which will greatly increase the capacity for the area.

GROWTH FORESEEN

With high-rise construction booming in the city it is conceivable that Vic West will become a high density area in the not too distant future.

The old pipe is not being ripped out, but the new main is being laid parallel to it along the edge of Esquimalt Road. This method causes little if any disruption of automobile traffic.

The six-man crew engaged in the installation are scheduled to complete the job by early August, and the old line will be disconnected and left in the ground.

FULL VALUE

This replacement is part of the city's depreciation program which spreads such work over a period of years. In this manner full value is gained from the water piping, and yet they are scheduled for replacement before they can deteriorate to the point of bursting.

When work started early in June there was no outcry from Victoria residents—but this would not have been the case in bygone days.

Fresh water in this area has been a controversial subject up until recent times.

HOW IT STARTED

Arguments over water can be traced back to 1858 when a schooner captain was denied the right to fill his fresh water casks from an Esquimalt creek.

Legislation was passed in 1885 giving Victoria the right to divert and use water within 20 miles of the city, and water was piped in from Elk Lake.

That same year the Esquimalt Water Works, a private company, received a charter to bring water into their area.

From that time the two water dispensers waged continual war, and there were many public meetings, steaming newspaper editorials, much legislation enacted, and court cases upon court cases over their individual rights.

TWO SYSTEMS

By 1915 two complete water systems had been built, one receiving its supplies from Sooke and the other its water from Goldstream.

Although Victoria had a relatively small population each of the systems could have supplied a city of 200,000 residents.

No new mains have been built for Victoria water since 1915. Victoria purchased the Esquimalt Water Works in 1925 and the controversy, which had lasted for almost a half century, ceased.

With the growth in population, and the urban spread of the city since the Second World War, it was felt advantageous by 1948 to form the Greater Victoria Water District to sell water in bulk to the municipalities.

There's a Tiger In Their Temple

BOMBAY, India (CNS)—The "mysterious east" is not a mere figment of Hollywood. It does exist.

Everyone here, from the mayor down to the post office clerk, is discussing what to do with a tiger which has descended on Bombay's suburbs.

The tiger, many people sincerely think, is non-violent and intensely religious-minded.

At least a dozen citizens claim to have seen the creature visiting the temple of Lord Shiva on the outskirts of Jogeshwari, a suburban village, and spending from 2 to 10 minutes in deep "meditation."

Jogeshwari is just on the edge of Aarey Forest which is believed to be the home of what has come to be called the "praying tiger."

The temple priest, Pandit Yadanathji, a 75-year-old bearded Hindu, claims he has seen the tiger in the temple courtyard at least "on a dozen occasions."

"I think he is genuinely pious," the priest said.

The Bombay police have received an order to shoot the animal but no policeman has taken the order seriously. Many policemen also are superstitious and some want the blood of a prayerful creature on their hands.

People around Jogeshwari say that the tiger has harmed no living creature in the vicinity.

Canadian Issue Earns Plaudits

By FAITH ANGUS

Canada's two new issues, particularly the 5c green pictorial Dr. Wilfred Grenfell at the wheel of his ship, cruising past an iceberg, are, on the whole, being praised by the critics and public in general.

Interest has also been shown in cancellations that appeared on first day Grenfell memorial covers mailed in Quebec. A collector of cancellations has described three differing varieties on covers received as follows:

All three have a single circle cancellation with maple leaf at top left outside the circle but one has "House of Commons" across the top within circle; "Chambre des Communes" across the bottom and a straight line marking in two lines below reading "Chambre des Communes/Premier Jour de L'Emission."

A second has "Senate of Canada/Senat du Canada" and below in straight lines, "Le Senat du Canada/Premier Jour de L'Emission."

The third has "Senate of Canada/Senat du Canada" and below, "Senate of Canada/First day of issue."

In each instance the circular cancellation also has at the right, six obliterating lines, three above and three below the word "Canada."

The owner of the covers states that he has never before seen the House of Commons or Senate of Canada cancellations in both French and English.

Ireland will issue a set of eight special postage stamps in April, 1966, to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the 1916 uprising. Seven of the stamps will bear a portrait of a signatory of the proclamation based on drawings by the late Sean O'Sullivan. The eighth will mark the uprising in a more general way.

Maldives Island's four large diamond-shaped stamps honoring International Quiet Sun Year are in compact sheets of nine stamps (values 5L., 10L., and 1R.) with all carrying the same design, — the G.E. observation-communication satellite. The sheet border features various American space vehicles. The postponed UNESCO set will be released this month. Denominations are 2, 3, 5, 10, 25, 50L. and 1R.

Psychiatrist Analyzes Doctors' Marriages

LOS ANGELES (LAT)—Some women marry doctors because they are looking for the kind of bolstering which patients sometimes seek from doctors.

And some doctors marry nurses because the uniforms represent the kind of authority and efficiency they feel they need.

When these two types come together the results can be disastrous, and help explain why doctors' wives probably have the highest incidence of emotional disturbance among wives of professionals, according to Dr. George T. Harding.

Dr. Harding, a psychiatrist, reports results of a 10-year study of 107 physicians' wives admitted to his Washington, Ohio, Psychiatric Hospital.

Dr. Harding emphasized that his was not a true sample of all doctors' marriages, but only those which failed. Most, he pointed out, are successful and permanent.

Being married to a doctor poses a triple threat to a certain kind of woman, he said. First, she may have been attracted to him in the first place because of unconscious need to marry somebody who would be as attentive as her idealized childhood family doctor, Dr. Harding said.

In fact, if she happens to have been a nurse—and 37 of the 107 doctors' wives studied were registered nurses—this same idealization may explain why she picked nursing as a career.

The second threat is her husband's occupational hazard of being constantly away from home and family.

And the third hazard is the easy availability of drugs and narcotics which she may be tempted to use to relieve her disillusionment and feeling of neglect, he said.

Forty-one of the 107 wife-patients were using barbiturates or narcotics at the time of hospital admission, the doctor reported.

Strangely enough, 17 of the 41 women were started on the drugs by their husband, a circumstance which led Dr. Harding to declare in an interview:

"When a doctor deals with his wife he doesn't use any better judgment than a layman would."

Another six of the wives got their drugs from other doctors, three more used their husband's samples, five got them from their husband's bag, three forged their husband's signature on his prescription pad and four stole the drugs.

Among the ways the husbands failed was by giving their wives a sedative instead of sitting down and listening to them.

"The pill she needed may be her doctor," he said.

Dr. Harding's study seems to put all the blame on the wives because he has not yet studied their doctor-husbands, he said. He plans to do this, if they will co-operate.

He also plans to dig into the underlying causes of mental problems in the wives of other professionals, such as ministers, lawyers and engineers.

His analysis of doctor-nurse marriages that fail:

"Each partner expects strength, guidance, direction and support—something which they thought they saw in each other but which actually existed only in fantasy, or perhaps only in the hospital setting and was not transferable to the home."

Doctors Lose Costly Battle

WASHINGTON (TNS)—The most expensive operation ever conducted by America's doctors was a failure: The patient lived. Last week the U.S. Senate began final debate on the first successful "medicare" bill, which is certain to pass. The American Medical Association is adding up the bills for its massive lobbying effort to kill medicare.

Probable total: about $10,000,000.

In the first three months of this year the AMA spent $851,376—20 times more than any other pressure group ever spent in the same period to push for or against a piece of legislation.

Two years ago the National Council of Senior Citizens estimated the AMA had spent $7,000,000 fighting President Kennedy's medicare bill. Now the Congressional Quarterly reports the AMA spent $1,500,000 in 1965 and $1,300,000 in 1966 to defeat President Truman's medicare proposals.

The present bill, introduced by President Johnson has passed the House of Representatives and the Senate Finance Committee and is expected to become law this month.

Questions... ..Answers

By CHARLES TAYLOR

Q. We are moving and have an electric dryer, which we installed at the time our previous house was built. Now we are wondering whether the dryer can be used in the house to which we are moving, or will it take special wiring?

A. Some dryers take larger voltage than others. I advise that you have an electrician check your appliance and make the installation, if a separate circuit is needed.

Q. We have an older house and the outside is redwood siding, which has had several coats of oil-base white paint. I want to paint with the new latex paint, but have been told by several neighbors that it will not stay on. What is your opinion? Should I put a primer coat on first or should I paint on top of what is already on? The paint and siding are in fair condition.

A. If the present paint is in good condition and the surface properly prepared, I see no reason why a top quality latex paint would not be satisfactory. Whether a primer is needed depends on the brand of latex paint you use, and the instructions will be on the container. In preparing the surface, remove all loose or peeling paint by wire brushing or sanding.

Q. Can paint spots be removed from cement?

A. A "washaway" paint remover will sometimes work. Apply with a small brush only on the paint spots. If this is not effective, try a strong solution of trisodium phosphate mixed in hot water, and scrub with a wire brush.

Q. Is there any way to prevent window screens from rusting? I know aluminum screens will not rust, but ours are not aluminum.

A. Scrub the screens, both wire and frame, with a solution of household detergent. Make it strong and sudsy and use it generously. Then rinse the screens with clear water and allow them to dry. There are rust preventive solutions on the market which can then be applied. Galvanized screens should be treated thrushy each year for long wear.

Q. Our bathroom walls and ceiling have moldy spots. Can these spots be removed and is there any way to prevent them?

A. Walls and ceiling should first be thoroughly cleaned, using a household bleach and scrubbing with a stiff brush. Rinse off with clear water after scrubbing. Then apply a mildew-resistant enamel, or use mildew-resistant adhesive in a top-quality enamel.

Young Musicians To Give Concerts

Three teen-age musicians will be featured performers during this week's noon concerts at the McPherson Playhouse.

Ian Franklin, 15-year-old oboist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra, will perform Monday, accompanied by Donna Denike. On the same program, Mrs.

Denike will accompany violinist Julia Hunt, assistant concert master with Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

MEDALLION WINNER
To end the program, Kenneth Bertram, 1965 Medallion winner for piano, will give a recital. At Wednesday's concert, Martin Chambers, baritone, and pianist Gail Wall, both 19, will tackle Robert Schumann's difficult Dichterliebe song cycle. "Dichterliebe is rarely performed, despite the fact it is very beautiful, because it is so taxing to the performers," concert producer Kenneth Gravenor said Friday.

Dichterliebe means "poet's love" and Schumann wrote the piece in 1840, when he himself was at the peak of a love affair with Clara Wieck, whom he married later that year.

The composition is based on 16 settings of poems by Heinrich Heine.

Test for Social Sensitivity

By KITTE TURMELL

Are you the socially sensitive type? "I suppose I am," murmurs shy, artistic Melanie. "Heck, no!" exclaims Charlie, active in a half-dozen things around school. As it happens, each may be wrong. How about you?

But first, let's explain the term "social sensitivity." It's not what makes you blush when you meet a girl, nor what causes you agonies when nobody asks you to dance. Empathy is the word scientists use to explain social sensitivity; that is, the ability to get outside yourself and see things—including yourself—through the other person's eyes. It can be one of your greatest aids in getting along with people.

For example: Melanie has great difficulty relating to other people or knowing how they feel or think about things. Much of the time she finds it hard to know how she feels herself, she is afraid to know how others see her. She has little social sensitivity.

Charlie, however, has been aware of the other fellow's viewpoint. This has made him lots of friends and brought him to leadership.

What's the first step toward developing your social sensitivity? Here are findings from the development of social sensitivity for young students as well as seasoned executives.

Professor Arthur Shedlin suggests that you ask yourself these questions; check his comments.

● "Am I looking at myself in a mirror, or through a magnifying glass?"

To see yourself as others do, hold up a mirror. It's the total effect that counts. Minor flaws that bother you may not be important to others. On the other hand, some things that you take for granted may bother others.

● "Do my friends often have a better opinion of me than I do myself?"

Teen-agers tend to short-change themselves when they rate their personalities. They say, "I'm really dull. Why should anybody want to know me?" Or when asked for an opinion, they shrug or mumble some excuse. Yet their friends are ready to believe they are interesting and want their opinions. If that's how they feel, they should do their best to live up to expectations.

● "Am I too emotional to make clear judgments about myself and others?"

All of us have feelings, but sometimes they get in our way. There is always some emotion, some tension in our relations with others. The main thing to know it is there and to make allowances for it.

Social scientists suggest you view your personality in terms of three levels. On the surface are the attitudes you are willing to show to the world. Beneath them are your privately-held attitudes, feelings you don't want to share with anyone. And buried below all are those subconscious and unconscious feelings you can't explain, and may not always suspect. The healthy teen-age personality, they explain, is based on acceptance of the existence of all three levels.

● "Do I prefer to draw back into a shell rather than meet problems head-on?"

Both adults and teen-agers set up defences around their personalities. This is a way to sugar-coat reality, to see the world through rose-colored glasses. A little of that is necessary, as long as you know when to stop kidding yourself and face reality.

● "Why do I want to develop my social sensitivity?"

So that it can provide you with a road map through the world of human relations, says Professor Shedlin. A high IQ isn't especially helpful — it could be a hindrance. What's most needed is your determination to take a good look at yourself in relation to others so you can make the most effective use of what you have to offer.

All Loaded Up To Tear Down

BOCHUM, West Germany (AP)—Loaded with beer and schnaps, a crane operator at an apartment building site here started to tear the joint down Friday. Police were called when the operator failed to heed the frenzied shouts of his co-workers. He climbed the arm of the crane to the top. Four firemen carried him down to the waiting arms of the police.

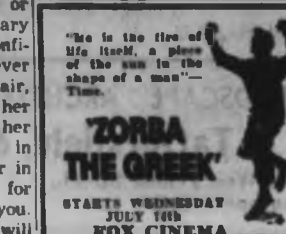

Dear "Mixed-Up": Tell the girl you like how you feel about her. Postpone asking her to go steady until you have more date experience. Don't consider going steady with any girl you do not like so much that you want to date her exclusively, and until you're sure you're ready to go steady with her only.

Dear "Uncertain": Assume he likes you. If he didn't he would act so indifferent that you'd notice his continual lack of attention, that's for sure!

Dear "Shapely": To give yourself that complimentary pen name indicates you are calling attention to your figure-asset—unconsciously perhaps—in ways that give her cause to feel self-conscious, and unattractive by comparison.

If you're a real friend you will never mention her height or weight in an uncomplimentary way. You will build up her confidence by mentioning whatever you do admire—about her hair, her eyes, her make-up—and her clothes. You will try to help her flower, socially, and grow in personality, by including her in group and date activities for which boys pursue shapely you.

July 21 Set for Hearing

Crime Spree Pair Indicted by Jury

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A U.S. federal grand jury indicted two former convicts Saturday on three counts of kidnapping following a three-state spree climaxed by the release of California finance director Hale Champion, his wife and baby daughter.

Arraignment before U.S. district judge Sherrill Halbert took only three minutes. The judge set July 21 for entering pleas and appointed defence lawyers.

The two men who led a suspense-filled chase from Oregon into California and Nevada were returned to the Sacramento County jail.

Bail for the accused pair, Wilford Marion Gray, 30, and Carl Cletus Bowles, 24, was put at $100,000 each by U.S. district judge Thomas J. MacBride in Sacramento Friday.

In Oregon the two face six federal kidnapping counts, a bank robbery charge and the accusation that they murdered a deputy sheriff. The Oregon bail was set at $150,000 each.

U.S. attorney Cecil F. Poole of San Francisco, representing the government, said after Friday's arraignment that the maximum penalty on the kidnapping charges was life imprisonment.

Maximum penalty in Oregon also is life imprisonment since the death penalty in that state was recently abolished.

EXTRADITION REFUSED

At Eugene, Ore., Lane County District Attorney William Frye said that Poole would not relinquish custody of the two prisoners to Oregon authorities. The two are charged in Lane County with first-degree murder in the slaying of sheriff's deputy Carlton E. Smith, 33, shot to death Tuesday night after stopping a car registered to Gray.

Authorities of three states accuse Gray and Bowles of cutting a robbery, rape, kidnapping and murder trail that got under way early Monday when a motel near Portland, Ore., was robbed. On Tuesday an Oregon bank was robbed of $12,000. On Tuesday night, deputy Smith, a rookie, was shot to death on his first night patrol.

Hanoi Trip Ill-Timed

Douglas-Home Blasts Mission

LONDON (UPI)—Opposition Conservative Party leader Douglas-Home Saturday accused Prime Minister Wilson of sending a special emissary on a peace mission to Hanoi that could succeed only if Britain played support of the Communist line.

Douglas-Home made the charge as informed sources said Wilson's emissary is finding no response from North Vietnamese leaders in his peace soundings in Hanoi.

OPPORTUNISM

In a speech before a convention of Conservative Party leaders in Edinburgh, Douglas-Home accused Wilson of opportunism in mounting what he termed here ill-timed measures that "can gravely damage Britain's authority at a time when it is most needed in world affairs."

Wilson had touched off a furor in Commons earlier this week when he disclosed that he had dispatched junior minister Harold Davies, a member of the Labor party left wing, in an effort to get peace talks on Viet Nam started.

ENTRY REFUSED

Hanoi had joined Moscow and Peking in refusing to receive the four-member British Commonwealth peace mission, but Wilson did not accept the refusal as final.

A foreign office official who accompanied Davies to Vietnam was refused entry to Hanoi and was left cooling his heels in the capital of Laos.

SOUNDINGS

Davies arrived in Hanoi last Thursday aboard a plane of the International Control Commission (ICC), set up under the terms of the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina, and was installed in a government villa, according to the sources.

His round of exploratory peace soundings is to include a meeting with North Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh, the sources said. Davies has been described as on good terms with Ho.

Father Denies Pressure In Gang Rape

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—A prominent Oklahoma City lawyer and political figure Saturday defended his role in a police investigation that led to charges against his son and five other teenage boys in the alleged gang rape of a 15-year-old San Antonio, Texas girl.

David Shepard, a leader in the Oklahoma prohibitionist movement and unsuccessful candidate for attorney general in 1962, denied that he took his 16-year-old son from police headquarters without authority during the investigation.

He also denied published reports that he brought "pressure" against relatives of the girl in an unsuccessful effort to persuade them not to file charges.

Shepard said he took his son from the police station Thursday after officers told him the boy would be charged, but would be allowed to make bond.

"I immediately took him to a bondman," Shepard said.

Talked to Girl's Family

Shepard said he talked to the girl's family after he learned of the Wednesday night attack, "but I made no attempt to pressure the family into doing or not doing anything."

The girl's aunt, with whom she was visiting, had quoted Shepard as saying: "Boys will be boys. Why ruin their reputation and your own?"

Police officers asked that charges be filed against Shepard for his role in the investigation, but the county attorney's office said a decision would not be made until the investigation is complete.

Shepard is accused of removing his son, John William Shepard, 16, from the juvenile department of police headquarters after he had been taken into custody. Both later appeared in court. The boy was arraigned, bond was posted, and both were gone before police investigators realized the boy had been taken from the station house.

The Shepard youth, James D. Fellers, 17, and Johnny Ishmael, 16, all from fashionable, suburban Nichols Hills, were arraigned Friday. All three were released on $10,000 bonds.

Refused to Answer

The three other suspects, twins Michael Otis Stanley and Richard Payton Stanley, 17, and Larry Wyatt, 17, all of Midwest City, were unable to immediately post bond and were held in jail. They defiantly refused to answer questions as the officers tried to interview them in their cells Friday.

A seventh suspect was arrested late Friday, but he was exonerated after a lineup at police headquarters. The girl, who claimed seven boys raped her, was not able to identify him.

The other six are charged with second-degree rape. They are accused of picking the girl up at a northside drive-in restaurant and taking her to a deserted area north of the city. There, police said, she was threatened and forced to submit. A physician who later examined the girl confirmed she had sexual relations.

After the series of attacks, the girl said she was given back her clothing, returned to Oklahoma City and let out at the drive-in. She said that when she arrived at her aunt's home, Shepard's father was there urging her aunt not to take the matter to the police.

'Boys Will Be Boys'

"Boys will be boys," the aunt quoted the elder Shepard as saying.

The mood of the shocked and shaken city was reflected in a strongly-worded resolution in which the Greater Oklahoma

City Council of Churches condemned a general atmosphere of condoning lawlessness and urged community action to change the moral climate.

The resolution was prompted by a disclosure by County Attorney Curtis Harris that at least a dozen gang rape cases have been reported in Oklahoma City in recent months, but parents of the victims refused to press charges.

Harris said 10 boys recently were suspended from two Oklahoma City high schools for membership in a secret sex club. He said the 16-year-old daughter of a business executive was attacked at a party sponsored by the club. But the girl's father would not prosecute.

Missing Boat Sighted

VANCOUVER (CP)—The wreckage of the fishboat Dolores L. has been sighted on rocks in Skidegate Channel, search and rescue headquarters here reported Saturday.

There was no immediate word on the lone man aboard the vessel, Herb Baker of Skidegate. A search for the craft, missing several days, had been called off earlier in the day.

Lakeview Riot

Convicts Hunted

Police Saturday watched Island ferry terminals to prevent any bid to reach the mainland by four escapees from Lakeview open prison.

The four, who include 19-year-old James Oliver Erdman of Victoria, got away early Friday.

Erdman, of 4524 West Saanich Road, was serving an 18-month sentence for breaking, entering and theft.

The other three were: Stanley Herron, 20, of North Burnaby; Philip Smith, 18, of Vancouver, and George Conklin, 23, of New Westminster.

All were serving less than two-year terms.

Meanwhile, repercussions were continuing from a riot in the prison last month, with additional jail sentences meted out to convicted participants.

Saturday in Campbell River, magistrate's court Earl H. Whitlock of Nelson was sentenced to two years less one day on a charge of taking part in a riot. A charge against him of causing mischief was dismissed.

Three other inmates were sentenced earlier this week. They were: George Mason of Terrace and Desmond Ballard of Kingston, Ont., who both received terms of two years less one day definite in the young offenders unit and two years less one day indefinite on charges of causing mischief and taking part in a riot.

RIOT CHARGE

Bruce Michael Bird of Nanaimo received a sentence of two years less one day definite on the riot charge and two years less one day definite plus two years less one day indefinite on the mischief charge.

Two juveniles have been remanded until their parents can appear.

The riot caused widespread damage to camp buildings and equipment but no injuries were reported. Fourteen juvenile offenders were removed to the maximum security institution at Oakridge following the riot.

Ladysmith

Police Check Every Lead In Abduction

LADYSMITH — A second RCMP interview with Mrs. J. A. Knight has turned up no new information on the man who abducted her Tuesday.

Insp. George MacKay, officer commanding Victoria subdivision, said Mrs. Knight can add no more information about her kidnappers.

She has been unable to give a description of the man who abducted her from her home at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, tied her hands, and left her under boards and rubble in a wooded area on the Knight property.

Insp. MacKay said many police officers remain in the Ladysmith area checking every lead.

"We have received some tips from the public, and every one is being checked out," said Insp. MacKay.

But he added "I don't know how much help they will be."

The 52-year-old woman was the victim of what is believed to be the first kidnapping-for-ransom in B.C. history.

Less than one hour after the abduction, Mrs. Knight's husband, prominent Ladysmith stockbroker since 1904, received a telephone ransom demand.

He was told to have $4,000 ready by 4 p.m., but was not told where to deliver the money.

Searchers found Mrs. Knight 30 hours after the kidnapping.

Modern Highwaymen Raid Phone Booths

Assaults on roadside pay telephones on the Island's stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway this year have already equalled the whole of last year's damage. In round figures, B.C. Telephone Company puts the loss at $2,500.

That's the result of nine plunderings, eight of them in the space of six weeks recently, in which the pattern has nearly always been the same. Coin boxes are ripped away from the rest of the telephone apparatus, torn open and robbed of their contents.

Worried telephone officials, who saw last year's subplots get clean away without prosecution, are hoping they have found a future deterrent with the sentencing in Victoria of a 35-year-old transient to two years in jail on three charges of theft from coin boxes.

The man was picked up by police after attacking the phone booth at Malahat Chale, Goldstream Park and Mill Bay the same day.

Moths Imported To Control Weed

NANAIMO—Three thousand hungry cinnabar moths are now gobbling up the dreaded tansy ragwort, a weed infesting farms south of Nanaimo.

The larvae of the moths were released last week, by federal biologists from Vancouver.

Another 1,000 moths were released last year in an experimental venture to see if they would ease the problem.

Last year five cattle died from eating the poisonous weed, which causes liver ailment.

For the past 50 years the cinnabar moth has been used to control the weed in England, but only recently has the method been tried in this part of Canada.

The Nanaimo area has the most successful cinnabar colonies anywhere in the country. The moths have an invaluable asset: The weed is their only food, and when tansy ragwort is eliminated the moths die of starvation.

Joe Garner, Richardson Road, on whose property the moths have been released, said there were other ways of eliminating the weed, such as spraying and extensive cultivation.

Moths will eat the weed along rough logging roads, in rough pasture, or beneath power lines, all places where it is hard to spray.

In one location in B.C. tansy ragwort is deliberately grown, at UBC where the moths are bred to meet the demands of the farmers.

Tansy Ragwort is not a native plant, Mr. Garner said. It is believed the weed was brought to Vancouver Island in hay from either northwest Washington or England.

Once growth is started it will kill off all other vegetation with its exceptionally strong roots, while the plant can grow to five feet from the ground.

In England the plant is known as "stinking Willie", while in Australia it has the colorful name of "yellow peril."

Mr. Garner is weed control officer for this area and he urged the general public to co-operate by killing all tansy ragwort plants they might have in their gardens, because one plant is capable of throwing out 150,000 seeds.

He said the weed is not harmful to humans because it must be eaten constantly for a week before it is fatal. Unfortunately when cattle feed on the weed they become addicted.

Peace Prize Winner

Pauling Encourages Comox Peace Group

COURTENAY — Nobel Peace Prize winner Dr. Linus Pauling has congratulated Comox Project '65 peace workers for their efforts in Victoria and at Comox to "produce nuclear disarmament."

Project '65 has released the text of the letter from Dr. Pauling sent to John Henson of Victoria, a participant in the project.

PAULING PLEASED

"I am pleased to learn about the activity of you and others in Victoria in the endeavor to produce nuclear disarmament, and especially about your plans for a demonstration to be held in front of the main gate of the Canadian Air Force base at Comox July 15, 1965."

"I am sorry to say my schedule is such that I cannot address the meeting.

"I send my best wishes to you in your efforts to achieve peace in the world. The tragic events in Viet Nam emphasize the immorality of national government and the possibility that an international war may, through interference of the great powers, grow into a nuclear war that might mean the end of civilization."

"I believe the time has come now when we are forced to eliminate war from the world, and that it is the duty of every human being to contribute to the fight against war and for its replacement by a system of world law based upon the principles of justice and morality."

Wednesday, July 14, a mass rally will be held in Courtenay at Lewis Park. It will begin at 8 p.m.

A full description and explanation of Project '65 will be given with plans for July 15 and the rest of summer discussed. A hootenanny will follow the speakers.

July 15 action at the RECAF station planned by Project '65 will begin at 1 p.m. and continue through the afternoon until 7 p.m.

All participants have been asked to meet at 12:30 p.m. in the parking lot across from the main entrance to the base, where final briefing will be continued. Another briefing meeting will be held Saturday, July 17.

Road Crash Kills Top Student

SCITUOLA — The valedictorian in recent high school graduation ceremonies on Malcolm Island was killed late Friday night in a motorcycle accident.

Kenneth Lawrence Wilman, 17, a top student and member of the senior boys basketball team during the last term, died in a crash at Scitula.

Wilman was travelling from Rough Bay to Scitula on Malcolm Island, and crashed with a car as he rounded a curve.

'A' STUDENT

He graduated from Malcolm Island elementary secondary school this year. He was an A student, who made extra money during the year by hand-logging.

Wilman floated several booms during the year, and planned to work for another year before going to university.

BORROWED CYCLE

The motorcycle was an older model which he had borrowed from his best friend, Tarmo Pakkila.

He is survived by his parents Mr. and Mrs. Lauri Wilman of Scitula, brother Charles, 21, and sister Mrs. Eileen Woodbridge.

School Board Program Promotes Integration

By JOY HUNTLEY

CAMPBELL RIVER — The efforts of segregation of Indian children will be met by school board here with a kindergarten pilot program next year.

The kindergarten classes will mix white and Indian children, and allow them to adjust to one another before school begins.

Trustees reversed their previous stand on kindergartens, which would have rejected the classes and used the extra space and staff to promote a lower pupil-teacher ratio.

POLICY CHANGE

The change in policy followed a meeting with Chief Councillor Dave Moon of Cape Mudge Indian Band, and two other councillors.

Mr. Moon told the board children raised on an Indian reserve suffer to some extent from segregation and they often drop behind white companions in early school years, during a period of readjustment.

He asked that kindergarten be established to help these children before they reach grade one.

START THIS FALL

The board agreed, and will start the classes in September on Quadra Island and in Elm School area.

The Elm kindergarten will aid Indian children on the Quinsam reserve in Campbell River.

The board stressed these kindergartens must have enrollment of both white and Indian children to succeed.

ALL ADMISSIBLE

All children five years of age are admissible, regardless of racial descent.

School trustees also considered another step to further the aims of better education for district Indians.

The board will look into the

Tasmanian Stole Show, Trophy

World champion logger Clayton Stewart

Champion baby Nadine Adrienne Smith

Ex-world champion logger Max Searls

By BILL STAVDAL

A smiling Tasmanian named Clayton Stewart stole the show at All-Sooke Day Saturday and proved he deserved the title of world champion logger.

Wielding his axe like a scalpel, he slit through a 14-inch alder in less than half the time of his closest competitor.

In another test of strength and speed, he slashed the same butt in half in 26 strokes.

More Than 10,000

More than 10,000 spectators saw him awarded Sooke's perpetual challenge trophy as best all-around logger in the 29th annual loggers' sports day.

A clear-cut tradition ended when rain began falling on Sooke State late in the afternoon. But it was a light sprinkle that most spectators ignored.

Dumped His Kin

They were too busy watching feats of skill and strength that brought together the best loggers in the Pacific Northwest.

Loggers Get a Belt Out of Ventilation

Why do most loggers wear those funny-looking suspenders, instead of a belt?

Because those funny-looking suspenders make it easier to work, they say.

"A belt cuts off your wind and circulation," said All Sooke Day contestant Bob Weibel, a six-foot-one feller from Swanton, Ore.

Annex John Miller of Roseburg, Ore., said: "A belt binds me."

Shantman and logging contractor Malcolm Harper of Port Angeles disagree. He's a belt man.

"It's just a matter of choice," he said. "I feel I have better freedom of my shoulders without suspenders."

But the consensus is against him.

Mike Acres, a power saw mechanic from Woss Camp, on the north end of the Island, said suspenders give freedom of movement. A belt just rides down, he reported.

"And with suspenders, you've got ventilation."

ladies' nail-driving contest for the eighth time. She learned the knack doing her own carpentry a few years ago.

And with no more effort than it takes to smile, 10-month-old Lorraine Marie Selina earned the title of best baby. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert John Selina, 519 Parklands Drive, Victoria.

Baby Contest

Best Sooke baby was Nadine Adrienne Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Smith, and the best baby under six months was Cameron Alexander Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dean, 61 Maddock Avenue West, Victoria.

Hungry visitors ate 500 pounds of roast beef, half a ton of spring salmon barbecued over an alder fire, and nearly 200 gallons of Sooke's own clam chowder.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Summer entertaining is in full swing as the fine weather gives promise of staying for awhile. Hope it isn't blowing and raining this morning when you read the above.

Woodwyn Farm out on Saanich Inlet will be the setting this evening when Mrs. W. C. Woodward entertains guests at a buffet supper party.

Party for Londoners

The Ronald Wilsons are here from London and are staying for a month with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson at Towner Park Road.

The Harold Wilsons are giving a party on Tuesday evening at the Oak Bay Golf Club for their son and his wife.

Motoring from Quebec

Motoring across Canada from their home in Rock Island, Quebec and expecting to arrive here on the 21st are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Pease. They will stay with Peg Pease's mother, Mrs. T. M. Jones on Roslyn Road.

Laura Jones will be giving a party for them on the 27th

This month. The Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Pease will be going to this party, too.

It has been several years since Peg Pease has been back on a holiday here and she has been wondering how many of her old friends are still around. They will be here for about three weeks.

Fabulous Wools

That old adage about if you want something done get a busy person to do it seems to apply to Mrs. Malcolm G. Taylor.

All the social and other obligations connected with being the wife of the president of the University of Victoria would be enough for most people. But not for Vi Taylor.

That exclusive wool shop, Boutique de Laine, out on Esplanade Avenue is Vi Taylor's dream put into reality.

Vi Taylor has always had other interests besides a heavy social schedule. She taught recreation and supervised teen age activities when they lived in Richmond, California, and did the same sort of work when they were in Calgary.

Now that both her son and daughter are away at school, Berne is at Shawinigan Lake School and Deanne at the University of British Columbia, Vi thought it was time she took the plunge.

It was in Calgary that Vi Taylor got the idea for her shop. Not having knitted for several years she called into a place where special wools were sold and instruction given.

Now during this period of knitting revival Vi feels that her place will offer something different.

It is stocked with imported Swiss and French wools that you won't see anywhere else in town.

The wools, beautiful tweed mixtures and fringed, fine mohairs, come in fabulous colors.

Even if you don't knit, these wools are almost sure to inspire you to learn. And Allean Sewart is right there to give you the best in instruction and advice.

Suits, dresses, sweaters and evening coats are all possible

In these lovely wools and there are heavier types for the jumbo or ski type sweaters and coats.

And if you are a do-it-yourself type for the modish sequined evening blouses, Vi Taylor has stocked these kits, too. They come in black and white, silver and gold and pink and blue.

There is also a line of colored ribbons for this new type of knitting.

A peek at this shop is worthwhile. It really looks boutique. I shared a laugh with Vi when she told me about one salesman. He was highly skeptical about her ability to run a wool shop and told her the place looked more like an interior decorating place.

Right from the striped blue and green swirling over the windows outside this place is chic and you have to hand it to the salesman for at least recognizing a smartly decorated place. And it is almost all "hand" done.

Barbara Burns and Mary Black did a lot to help Vi Taylor in the decorating. They did the sketches, or most of them, anyway.

The brushes beside the palette in the window have bamboo handles and colored "wool" bristles.

The gorgeous flowers that look like chrysanthemums, the white and yellow ones, particularly, are also made of wool. There is a French flower cart filled with colored wool and there is also a spinning wheel to keep your mind on the wool.

Vi Taylor and Mary Black are proud of the painted arboreal tree that is decorated with wool pompons as they roamed the woods to find exactly what they wanted.

White and gold picture frames match the mirror and the trendy looking chairs covered in green stripes.

Seeing Europe

Young Gay Arneson has been getting around Europe in a big way since she left last summer.

Gay has left the family she was staying with in Milan and after four days in Rome where she "saw as much as I possibly could" with a sight-seeing group.

After Rome it will be a visit to Venice and then on to Switzerland to stay with friends in Lugano.

Later Gay will join her mother, Mrs. Deane Arneson, in London.

Dr. Peter Alexander Sweeney and his daughter,

Maureen, were recent visitors here.

It was Dr. Sweeney's first visit to his native city in 11 years. The changes he saw left him positively gasping. He is the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sweeney of Victoria.

He has four daughters, and a son, all with Irish names, Terry, Maureen, Colleen, Kevin and Erin.

Mrs. Gwladys Welsh left last Saturday aboard the Laurentia to spend several months in Europe.

To Live in England

Gillian Scott-Moncrieff Weds Graham V. Bewley

An heirloom veil of Brussels lace which belonged to her maternal grandmother was "something old" worn by Gillian Vere Scott-Moncrieff when she exchanged marriage vows, Saturday afternoon, with Graham Vincent Bewley.

Her floor-length gown of oyster satin was styled on princess lines featuring a V neckline and sleeves ending in flared points. White roses and altarpieces were in her bouquet.

Arrangements of summer flowers decorated St. Stephen's Anglican Church, 311 Newton Cross Road, when Canon George Biddle and Rev. O. L. Foster officiated at the ceremony uniting the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ronald Scott-Moncrieff, 983 Radcliffe Lane, and the son of Mrs. A. H. Bewley, Scompton, Sussex, England, and the late Mr. Bewley. Dr. Scott-Moncrieff gave his daughter in marriage.

Organist was Mrs. M. E. Yarrow. Peach-toned gowns of nylon organza were worn by bridesmaid, the Misses Kathleen Gibson, Penny Scott-Moncrieff, Robin Spicer and Nicola Young. They carried colonial bouquets of rapture roses and altarpieces.

Best man was M. Coldren.

Ushering guests to their seats were Alastair and Bryan Scott-Moncrieff and Jonathan Buckle. Louis Scott-Moncrieff proposed the toast to his place at the reception following in the church hall. A three-tier wedding cake centred the bride's table.

Following a honeymoon trip up-island and through the Rocky Mountains, the couple will make their home in England.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Bewley chose a main yellow silk dress, complemented with tan accessories.

Viscountess Oshie of Culrose, Scotland was among the guests from out-of-town at the wedding. Also attending from Great Britain were Mrs. R. Murray and the Misses Jean Murray, Marjorie Stirling, and Patricia Miller.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

New centre for fine Scandinavian furniture . . .

We don't usually let grass grow under our feet . . . but must confess that only last week did we get in to see C. E. Sorvin . . . that attractive new Scandinavian furniture store which opened in April . . . And what we saw filled us with admiration! . . . We learned that it's a branch of the store of the same name doing business in Vancouver for the past eight years . . . The local store is staffed by Mr. and Mrs. Lind . . . a charming Danish couple whose enthusiasm for their merchandise is equalled only by their expert knowledge of it! . . . To begin with, this store is unique in Victoria in that it sells nothing but imported Scandinavian furniture, drapery fabrics, lamps and stainless steel . . . Furniture is teakwood . . . contemporary in design . . . in those graceful, clean-cut lines the Scandinavians excel in . . . There's a fine selection of dining room furniture . . . 23 different styles of tables, and almost as many chairs . . . A number of very nice desks in various sizes . . . Some truly exciting bedroom furniture (something we haven't seen too much of heretofore) . . . Imported drapery materials to set this contemporary furniture off to perfection! . . . Do drop in soon and see . . . C. E. Sorvin Ltd., 2096 Douglas Street, 286-2612.

The long-held feminine theories that men prefer frills may just be all wrong, writes Ernestine Carter in the London Times. Could be that our men-folk prefer clean lines, unsexy cut and an independent air!

For men who want to look debonair . . .

We never did get beyond the men's furnishings department when we were in Wilson's this week . . . It was the handsome sport shirts which first caught our eye . . . It's our reluctant opinion that far too many men . . . with otherwise good taste . . . seem to go all to pieces when selecting leisure-wear attire . . . particularly shirts! . . . If your man-folk share this failing, you'd be awfully smart to start them off on the right track with the gift of a sport shirt from Wilson's . . . The meticulously tailored Hathaways . . . fine batiste in small subdued checks . . . or manly stripes . . . come at $8.95 . . . plain colors at $7.95 . . . Short sleeves in all of these . . . Another very good make is Lipton, and these are a bit lower priced . . . $6.95 . . . Have very interesting striped patterns, again in unobtrusive colors which manage to look distinctive as well as debonair and sporty! . . . And here's the perfect shirt for the man who likes to muck around with boats . . . as one of our manly friends so aptly put it . . . an Aertex material-type pullover shirt . . . darkish blue with white trim . . . fits loose and easy . . . won't sag or stretch . . . will stand a lot of abuse (?) . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 283-7177.

The "cold-shoulder" style in evening gowns . . . one shoulder covered, the other bare . . . is coming in big for fall. Indications are that it may well be the "Ford" of the coming season.

Plan ahead . . . book early . . . consult Paul's . . .

It could happen that you have to take off for some part of the world in a hurry . . . but 99 times out of 100 you know months . . . even a year ahead . . . that you're going to travel . . . and if you're smart you won't procrastinate about making definite plans . . . "The experienced traveller realizes the importance of booking early" . . . they told us the other day at Paul's Travel Service . . . and who should know better whereof they speak? . . . In order to get sailings or flights for the exact dates you want . . . the type of hotel accommodations you desire when you reach your destination . . . the thing to do is book as long as possible ahead of time . . . Not only are you able to get exactly what you want . . . to suit your tastes and budget . . . but in the long run, you'll get better service from the transportation companies and hotels . . . because they too, knowing what to expect, will be better geared to look after you . . . Right now Paul's are taking bookings for Hawaii for next December . . . as well as for the Grand Cayman trip . . . and if you've any thought of such a vacation next winter or spring, it isn't a minute too soon to let Paul's take things in hand . . . No deposit is required . . . and if for some reason you have to cancel later . . . it's as easy as picking up the phone! George Paul's Travel Service, 1046 Government Street, EV 2-9108.

There's an overall trend to the softer look in all the new clothes. Pared-down dirndl skirts appear on many suits and dress-jacket costumes.

A specialty shop you mustn't miss . . .

What we have to tell you about Miss Frith's today is addressed to our good friends and welcome visitors from south of the border . . . because you Victoria people know what a fine ladies' specialty shop Miss Frith's is . . . and what beautiful things you're liable to find there . . . but of course there's no law against you going in for a look-see yourself . . . especially if you crave a pure camel-hair coat . . . or a gorgeous Italian knit suit or dress! . . . There are some very fine camel-hair coats at Miss Frith's right now . . . classic tailored models, some with hand-stitched detail . . . one particularly handsome coat is double-breasted . . . They're made of pure camel hair from England . . . and are priced around $70, which seems to us extremely reasonable for such high quality and smartly styled coats . . . As for knits, there's an excellent selection of two and three-piece suits by Jontel . . . Couturier . . . Avanti and Knitella . . . all from Italy . . . while from Austria come some really drowsy knits that you could wear to a wedding or a cocktail party . . . All pure wool, with intriguing trim . . . A couple of stunning pure silk knits from France . . . one pink, the other (a size 18) in navy . . . There's a big selection of leather handbags . . . remarkably reasonable in price . . . In Victoria, be sure to visit . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashion, 1817 Douglas Street, EV 2-4912.

Andres Courreges, who introduced the baby doll look a year ago, is being widely imitated by American designers who are creating their own versions of the grown-up toddler.

A good dry cleaner is a treasure . . .

When we came to live in Victoria three years ago, one of the first things we did was enquire around among friends for the name of a really good, reliable dry cleaner . . . That's how we came to learn about Paisley Cleaners . . . And while we must admit we did a bit of flitting around with other cleaning establishments in those early days . . . we finally settled down happily with Paisley, from whom, we swear, we'll never be prised loose! . . . So when we recommend Paisley Cleaners to you, we're really speaking from the heart . . . To begin with, they do a terrific job (it's all done right on the premises by people who know and respect good clothes) . . . Pressing is just right (our husband is one of those men who's fussy about the roll of sleeves and such) . . . Things are picked up promptly and delivered back to you in a couple of days . . . even faster if you're in a hurry for them . . . And if, like us, you're one of those people who's allergic to cleaning tags, just say the word and they'll remove them, before delivery . . . What's more, Paisley's regular prices are generally lower than anywhere else in town, as far as we can discover! . . . They'll do repair or minor alterations for you . . . handle everything you send them with loving care . . . Paisley Cleaners, 823 Gore Street, 284-3734.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing this letter through tears, as I gaze upon two burned sirloin steaks, two over-baked Idaho potatoes, two wilted salads and a fallen chocolate soufflé.

Paul is no kid. He is past 25, and we've been engaged two years. I can't count the number of times he has stood me up like this. The date is always set at his convenience. Then, after I've knocked myself out preparing dinner, Paul doesn't show up.

If he called (even at the last minute) and said he couldn't make it, I'd accept his excuse whatever it was, but I never hear a word until the next day. He is always soooooo sorry—but he has to be a buddy, or his boss asked him to go on an urgent mission or his mother got sick.

We've talked about this problem dozens of times and he doesn't know why he forgets to call me. He promises, "It won't happen again," but it always does.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you are not an expert on men's clothing, but I believe this is a matter of common sense, and you are an expert on that. The fellow I am going with is an immaculate dresser. He has excellent taste in clothes and is one of the sharpest looking men in town—until you get to his feet. His socks are always down around his ankles. When he is seated you can see his chalk-white, hairy legs. They look ghastly.

I've told him fifty times that those droopy socks spoil his appearance. He tells me garters are for squares. What about this?—MISS ICK.

Dear Miss: Garters are for people who want to keep their socks up. If your friend doesn't want to wear garters he can buy socks with elastic tops. Be a sport and buy him a pair and I'll bet he'll never wear any other kind.

So far as we know, our friends and relatives are not aware of the expected baby. I am writing to ask how to deal with the situation. According to all calculations our grandchild will be 10 weeks early. We do not want to put on that "premature" baby act. It has been grossly overdone in this town and nobody believes it anyway.

Is it wise to tell people now that the baby will be early? Or should we wait until the baby is born and then say we knew it would be early?—M.L.O.

Dear M.L.O.: No explanations or apologies are necessary—either before or after the arrival of the baby. Your real friends will be considerate and say nothing. You owe the others nothing.

Bride's Attendants In Pink and Mauve

St. John's Anglican Church was the scene Saturday evening for a double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Eleanor Margaret Swetnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Swetnam, 615 Bryden Court, and Mr. Delbert Kirkpatrick, son of Mrs. Agnes Kirkpatrick, 748 Transit Road.

Canon T. W. Scott officiated at the pretty summer wedding. Soloist Miss Jill Paver sang The Wedding Prayer and Mr. Bob Rhodes was accompanist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose a princess style gown of silk faced pease featuring a row of re-embroidered lace appliques down each side of the skirt's front panel. Sweeping the floor the controlled skirt opened into a full train in back. A silk veil softly misted from a coronet of silk illusion net petals. The bride carried a cascade of gardenias, stephanotis and pink roses.

Mrs. D. Townsend, matron of honor, was in a street-length gown of mauve crystal charm with floral chiffon overskirt. Mrs. B. Ivatts and Mrs. G. Parker, bridesmaids, and Miss Linda Erickson, bridesmaid, wore pink-toned gowns styled after the matron of honor's ensemble. They all wore softly pleated pill box headpieces in self fabric and veils on tops and carried crescent bouquets of pink carnations.

Mr. Douglas Adderley was best man and ushering were Mr. Denis Kirkpatrick, groom's brother, Mr. Bill Townsend and Mr. Jon Parker.

Mr. Peter Ivatts was master of ceremonies at the candlelight reception which followed in Holyrood House. Baskets of mauve, white and pink gladioli decorated the reception rooms for the occasion and centring the head table was a three-tiered cake made by the groom's mother and the bride.

For a honeymoon trip down the Oregon coast the bride chose a turquoise rayon taffeta two-piece dress and cream wool topcoat, with turquoise and cream accessories.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. D. Jones and family, Miss Linda Erickson, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. F. Erickson, Port Hope; Rev. Robert Warren, Burnaby, B.C.; Miss Raylene Nash and Miss Kay Ironside, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. G. Bradshaw, Africa.

They're Mealy Bugs

By M. V. CHESNUT

CHRISTMAS CACTUS (G. E. McD., Victoria). Those fuzzy little white spots on your cactus are mealy bugs. If there are only a few of them, pick them off individually on the point of a toothpick or pocket knife, bundle them up in a paper handkerchief and burn them. Keep a careful watch for new ones as the deposited eggs hatch out.

If there are too many of them for such individual treatment, paint the colonies with Volck oil spray, one teaspoonful in one cupful of water. Several treatments at weekly intervals will probably be necessary.

CHICKWEED CONTROL (E. W., Deep Cove). It is true I recommended Crab Grass Killer to eradicate chickweed growing in the lawn, but this was four or five years ago when potassium oxyacetate was the principal ingredient in crab grass killer. This chemical will kill chickweed without hurting the lawn grasses if used as directed.

In their search for better chemicals to control crab grass, though, the manufacturers have changed their formulas and unfortunately the new and highly efficient crab grass killers aren't worth a hoot against chickweed, hence your disappointment.

There is a new chemical called Mecoprop, however, which is doing a grand job against chickweed and other hard-to-kill weeds such as clover and ground ivy (Creeping Charlie). Mixed with 2,4-D weedkiller, it is sold under such trade names as Killex, Complotox, Wonder Weeder and Clover and Chickweed Killer.

MOULDY STRAWBERRIES (A. D., Royal Oak). I'm afraid it is too late in the year now to do anything about the dirty grey mould on this season's crop of berries, but at least you can prevent a recurrence in future years.

As soon as cropping is finished, clip all the foliage off close to the ground, take it up and burn it. As soon as new leaves appear, spray with a mixture of captain and wettable sulphur, two tablespoons of captain and four of sulphur per gallon of water. Next year use the same spray starting in early April and treating the plants every 14 days until the fruit is swelling nicely.

I think you will be pleasantly surprised at the sparkle and clean appearance of the berries under this captain-sulphur treatment.

KOHL-RABI CULTURE (P.E.O.H., Victoria). Most certainly it is not too late to put in seeds of kohlrabi. In fact, seeds of this excellent and tasty vegetable may be sown any time from early April right through until the middle of August, and it is a good idea to make a series of small sowings to maintain a continuity of supply. Sow in furrows 15 inches apart and half an inch deep, and when the seedlings appear, thin them out to stand 10 inches apart.

You don't lift and store kohlrabi as you would turnips, but leave them in the ground through the winter, pulling just enough for immediate use as required—they can take a great deal more frost than most other vegetables. The green varieties have a better flavor than the purple kinds.

ART BUCHWALD Refutes Apathy Label

Samaritans to the Rescue

NEW YORK—There has been a great deal of criticism about the apathy in New York City that one citizen shows towards another, but I'm happy to report that the campaign to make New Yorkers more conscious of their responsibilities is paying off.

I have a friend named George who has a trick shoulder that every once in a while pops out of its socket. When it happens George has a way of getting it back in, either by hitting the shoulder against a wall or lying on the floor and working it back in. While painful, it is not serious and George has been doing it for years.

Last week he happened to be in one of those chain snack bars and after having a sandwich and glass of milk he got up from his stool, reached for his hat, and suddenly his shoulder popped. He tried to work it in against the glass window, but when this failed he fell in the floor and proceeded to try to get it back in its socket.

Instead of the other people in the snack bar ignoring him, they all jumped off their stools at once. One shoved a spoon in his mouth which made it difficult for George to explain what he was trying to do.

Another man shouted, "Hold his arms and legs so he doesn't hurt himself."

A woman cried, "He's getting red in the face."

A third man said, "Look in his pockets. He's probably got instructions on what to do in case of a fit."

A man started searching George and took out his wallet. He spilled all the contents on the floor but couldn't find anything in it regarding George's illness.

"Loosen his tie," a lady said.

Someone tore George's shirt trying to loosen his tie.

The more they struggled the more they held him down, and the man who was holding the spoon in George's mouth wouldn't let up.

The person holding his arms wasn't helping George's shoulder much, either. It occurred to George if he relaxed perhaps they'd let him go.

But it didn't work like that. "He's passing out," a lady said. "Does anyone have any smelling salts?"

"We have ammonia in the kitchen," a waitress said.

She handed a bottle to someone who shoved it under George's nose, which made him gasp somewhat.

"He's gagging," a man said. "Loosen his belt and take off his shoes."

By this time even George had forgotten about his shoulder and all he was hoping to do was get out of the snack bar alive.

But the worst was yet to come.

"Does anyone know how to give artificial respiration?"

"I know how to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation," a large fat man said. And with that he leaned over and started breathing into George's mouth.

Fortunately, by this time an ambulance had arrived and when the doctor took the spoon out of George's mouth George explained the problem. The doctor helped him get his shoulder back in the socket.

George didn't have the heart to tell all the good Samaritans what was really wrong to him made a small speech thanking them for saving him through the attack. "If it hadn't been for all of you," he said, "I might not be standing here right now." Everyone in the snack bar seemed pleased.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Fans 'Cage' Beatles

MADRID (NANA)—Julia Christie, who rates as one of the "mates" of the Beatles, asked them to visit her on the Doctor Zhivago street where she was participating in the doctor's death scene. The boys declined. They love Julia but love their own skins more. "We're afraid to leave the Fox Hotel," they explained and, having seen the mob outside, I can believe it. "Why don't YOU come to our show in the hailing?" they asked Miss Christie. But she did not want to lose HER skin.

Hollywood producer Brynne Roy has an interesting partner for the war picture he will make in Spain—Jim Maggel, brother of Mrs. Robert Kennedy. The Kennedys have always been interested in the world of movies. From Papa Kennedy to John R. Kennedy... Brynne produced PT 109, the story of the late president's wartime experiences in the Pacific. "But the film was not a financial or critical success," but the president liked it," Brynne revealed, "and he particularly liked Cliff Robertson who portrayed him. Frankly, I didn't."

Ty Hardin called me to say hello and to tell me he was about to finish his role in Milton Sperling's Battle of the Bulge. "I'm mad about Spain. I'm living here for the next two or three years. My next picture is Kawango in Spain and Africa. Then I star in The Savage Pampas, for Hugo Frezza, in Spain. "What happened with your wife?" I asked the handsome Hardin. "Warlike beauty winner Schmidt has been with her mother in Germany with our child. She likes the tranquil life. I don't. She will return soon to America to divorce me."

When Anthony Quinn was in Madrid with The Centurians, he rented a villa for his new family—Jolanda and their two beautiful little boys. Tony, now in Almeria, in southeastern Spain, has the children with him on the set all the time, and between takes, he kisses and hugs them. They are the happiest three fellows you could ever meet.

I phoned Sam Berman to say hello and Sam seemed a bit deflated by his money problems, but, "I'm definitely going ahead with my plans for next year, to make Isabella of Spain and The French Revolution."

When Henry Fonda was in Madrid making Battle of the Bulge, he looked very much married to Shirley Adams, the ex-airline stewardess. Actually, they looked married to me when I saw them last year in Hawaii.

Ex-Queen Soraya plans to have her own film company. I am reliably informed. This must mean that she will not continue her deal with Dino de Laurentiis who, made her first and so far only picture. Soraya is no longer with Hollywood agent Missa Wallis. She has signed with someone else, although it was Miss Wallis who introduced her to De Laurentiis. I suppose an ex-queen can be just as lacking in gratitude as the ordinary actor or actress.

Former actress Binnie Barnes is resuming her film career in Mother Superior with Ronald Reagan, Hayley Mills, Claire Trevor and Gypsy Rose Lee, all playing nuns. Hayley will be a novice in the Bill Fyre production. Binnie is the wife of Columbia's top production executive, Mike Frankovich.

Carry on Cleo, the $172,000 parody on the $30,000, 000 Cleopatra, is making a fortune, while the original, which is still being shown here is playing to fairly empty houses.

Producer Sidney Fox is listening to offers from Universal and Paramount for his Bulding Drummond trio of feature films. The stories were written by Sapper in the early 20s, and as Fox told me over caviar and champagne—tough life—at the swank Mirabelle restaurant, "Drummond was the first of the James Bond heroes." As of this minute, the title is Female of the Species, but it could be changed.

Kids Possess Radar

SYDNEY HARRIS

"Who do you love most?" My five-year-old once asked me, enumerating all the children, including himself. "Don't be silly," I laughed weakly. "I love all of them the same."

He was not to be put off by this shabby parental device.

"Who do you love most?" he persisted, and waited for a serious and honest reply. All I could say was "I love you all the same, but in different ways, because you're different children."

He was not satisfied with this equivocating reply. He looked at me, then shrugged, and gave up the matter. I could see that I had lost a little status in his eyes, as a truth-teller and a square-shooter.

But how can one answer such a question, when the truth is hardly known, or if known, barely admitted to oneself? Every parent, I suppose, has one special favorite, one who has captured some secret place of the heart. He tries not to show it, even to feel it, but it is there—and the children know it is there.

Each of us wants to be God's favorite child; Cain, after all, slew Abel because he was jealous that God accepted Abel's gift and spurned his own. It was not so much an act of hate against his brother—there is no mention that they were unfriendly—as a burning resentment against what he considered the partiality of his "father" in heaven.

And again in the very first book of the Bible, we are told the story of Joseph, who was the younger son and favorite of his father, Jacob, and who thus became so hated by his older brothers that they sold him as a slave to a caravan going to Egypt.

All children are aware that their parents do not, and perhaps cannot, love them equally. The parents may be, as most are, scrupulously fair in treating them all alike, and even in giving a little extra to those less well endowed—but a child's radar system is frighteningly accurate about feelings we ourselves may not even know we possess.

It is these feelings—hidden even from ourselves—that determine how a child will react, to its siblings, and to the world at large. It is not so much what we do, or what we say, or the actual "techniques" of child-rearing that matter, as much as our emotional sub-stratum.

Parents who tend to blame themselves when a child turns out to have "problems" often ask themselves "What did I do wrong?" or "What did I fail to do?" In most cases, I think, there is no specific act or attitude or omission so pinpoint; and it is futile for the parents to blame themselves for feelings they did or did not have.

"Who do you love most?" is a question that cannot be successfully answered, or successfully evaded. This may be why the child, with its unerring instinct for our weaknesses, eventually confronts us with it.

Colonist Swim Classes

Whole Year Has Gone —Seems Like Yesterday

By MARGIE NAYSMITH

Every year as we start the swim classes I always feel as if I had just left yesterday.

I had almost put this feeling down as one of the things that comes with age, and had just said so to my assistant, when a little girl came up to us and said: "Do you remember me? I was here last year but it only seems like last week, now that I see you again."

I patted her on the head and assured her I knew what she meant.

OFF TO GOOD START

Last week got off to a real good start. The weather was just perfect for the first two days.

Then up came the good old wind. However, we did well in spite of it. We had a total attendance of 73 children last week. Only two people cried a few tears, which I might say is a record, or very close to it. We now have everyone practising breathing and kicking. At the end of each lesson we ask them to practise the breathing in the bathtub or at the beach every day.

KICKING THIS WEEK

If they all do this, we will be able to move along to the kicking and gliding this week. I am sure mom would take a dim view of the kicking being practised in the tub.

But everyone can practise breathing without running into any trouble.

I would just like to remind the children to please bring a bag that is strong enough and large enough to hold all their clothes while they are swimming, then hold the wet bathing suit and towel.

Also, it would be very helpful if the name and address were on the bag.

Last week one little girl almost lost her things because she put them in another bag that looked just like hers. Neither bag had a name on.

May I remind parents of children taking the bus to the lake that these children must return to town on that bus, unless they have a note signed by the parent asking permission for them to stay. Or, if a parent is at the beach and makes this known to us, we will excuse the child. Otherwise, they will be sent back to town on the bus.

Belly Landing in Mexico

Passengers Applaud Pilot

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI)—Mexican airline pilot Rafael Rico Vasquez enjoyed a hero's reward Saturday for his dramatic belly landing of a crippled airliner carrying 73 passengers after 3½ hours of circling to use up fuel.

The passengers, 30 of whom were Americans, waited aboard to applaud Rico Vasquez for bringing them down safely at Tijuana airport yesterday. Despite the collapse of the plane's wheels shortly after touchdown, the pilot was able to complete the belly landing with only partial damage to the right wing.

When he stepped from the English-made Britannia four-engine turbo-prop airliner, the pilot for Aerovias de Mexico was mobbed by an estimated 3,000 persons who gathered at the terminal to await the landing.

"This was one of the most beautiful belly landings I ever heard about," one passenger, San Francisco school teacher

Howard Rote, said. "It was so smooth we didn't even feel it."

Rico Vasquez noticed that the landing gear would not retract shortly after takeoff from the airport, located 20 miles south of San Diego, Calif., across the international border, on a flight to Mexico City. He began circling the border area to use up fuel and lighten the plane for an emergency landing.

REMAINED SEATED

While the plane circled, the passengers among whom was Mexican movie director Rene Cordova, were served refreshments and asked to remain in their seats.

Jaycees Go To Nanaimo

Victoria Jaycees' new executive will travel to Nanaimo Aug. 15, for an executive training session in Nanaimo's Bowen Park.

Newly-elected officers from all units in the Vancouver Island and Powell River district will trade tips on how to organize and run their units.

Organist Holds Concerts

Each at noon provided interludes in depth for audience of 30 in Christ Church Cathedral Saturday. Organist Geoffrey Thorsburn also played Purcell, Handel, Pachelbel, Vivaldi and Mozart. Peter Bishop, 15, himself an organist, turned pages. Noon concerts continue at 12:15 p.m. every Saturday through August. (Robin Clarke)

Sunday Concert

Naden Band Replaces Symphony

Band of HMCS Naden will substitute for the Victoria Symphony Orchestra at a concert in Centennial Square at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 25.

It is expected that the orchestra will perform next in the square at a similar concert Sept. 5.

NEW OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Victoria Symphony Society, the following executive officers were appointed:

Jack Barracough, president; Miss Sara Spencer, honorary president; Logan Mayhew and J. Brailwright, vice-presidents; W. W. Evans, treasurer; Mrs. M. Williamson, secretary; J. Alan Baker, solicitor.

U.S. Visitors Feted By Jaycees

A power plant worker and his wife from Sioux Falls, South Dakota, are this week's Victoria Jaycees tourists of the week. Jaycees picked Mr. and Mrs. Harry Erikson from among passengers on the B.C. Ferries Queen of Saanich, and treated them to a room at the Dominion Hotel.

Later they guided the Eriksons to tourist spots including the Olde England Inn, the Crown Jewels, the Undersea Gardens and Butchart Gardens.

Grain Strike Threatens To Affect Lakehead

Saskatchewan

Don Sinclair, manager of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool in Saskatoon, says the grain handlers' strike in Montreal which began three weeks ago threatens to back prairie wheat up to the Lakehead.

Mr. Sinclair said that, in addition, there is a major slowdown of grain movements on the Canadian Pacific Railway and a partial slowdown on the Canadian National Railways to the port of Vancouver.

Saskatchewan's wheat crop has the highest potential yield on record, according to the provincial wheat pool.

However, it cautioned the crop is vulnerable on two points: warm weather is required for full development and more rain is needed to support exceptionally heavy stands.

More than a million acres of Crown lands, where it is hoped oil exploration may develop, will be offered for sale by the Saskatchewan government Aug. 10.

Much of the area, the larger blocks in Maple Creek, Dumblaw, Elbow, Lumsden, Drinkwater, Willow Bunch, Dalmahoy, Carleton Place and Indian Head districts, is largely unexplored.

The exploration acreage sale is the third in the year.

Archdeacon Basil Proctor of Regina has disclosed a rare set of coincidences.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jarn and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Seide, unknown to one another, asked for a christening date for their infants on the first Sunday in July. The date was duly confirmed.

When the archdeacon asked, in the course of time, for the names of the babies he was astonished to learn each was to be called "Terence Lynn."

Why? "We have to like the names," the parents said.

Alberta

Rainbow Lake in northwestern Alberta has been established as a major oil prospect with Imperial Oil Ltd. paying $4,315,500 for two drilling reservations.

The lease is 13 miles south-west of Banff and is a discovery well.

It was mud, mud, mud Friday after rain hit the Calgary Stampede for the fourth straight day. The weathermen called for more of the same Saturday.

The rule has made a quadruple of the rodeo infield at the Stampede grounds and helped to drop five-day attendance about 20,000 off 1964 figures.

Evangelist Billy Graham said in Jasper he and Premier E. C. Manning discussed plans for a centennial year crusade by Mr. Manning.

Pair Taken As Hostages

TAYLOR, Ark. (UPI) — Two men robbed the Taylor branch of the First National Bank of Magnolia, Ark., and carried off two fighting, screaming women bank employees as hostages.

Witnesses said Mrs. Joe Hoyle and Mrs. Billy Nations, the only two persons in the small bank, fought wildly as the men dragged them to a pickup truck and drove off.

Amount of cash taken was not immediately determined.

Belgium Helps Artists

The Belgian government underwrites art exhibitions in a program designed to help artists and promote buying original works.

Manitoba

The federal government will contribute $25,000 towards a $75,000 centennial hall to be built at the International Peace Gardens near Emerson on the Manitoba-North Dakota border.

The building will contain an assembly hall, a banquet room, a kitchen and dining room.

The provincial government will provide $50,000. The gardens commemorates 150 years of peace between the United States and Canada.

Prospects for Manitoba's wheat crop are described as "excellent," a crop survey across the province shows.

Recent rains have been beneficial.

"There is always a frost risk," officials said, "but there's no use worrying about that until it hits you."

Mr. Justice Wilson was elected a benchman on May 27.

Two professional paddlers, Gib McEashern and Norm Corvax, pocketed $1,000 when they took first place in the fourth annual "In Flis Flis" four-man 81-mile canoe derby.

Their time was 11 hours 46 minutes and 46 seconds.

Only six minutes behind were John Norman and Walter Solva. Both pairs are from Flis Flis.

Never and More Orphans Squawk All Day

By TONY DILLON-DAVIS

A black tornado roared through a Victoria Avenue home recently, squeezing a tiny thing maleable and leaving small ornaments and utensils scattered over the floor.

Never (or was it More?) had struck again.

The Manning household hasn't been the same since Ben Manning brought two orphaned crows to his home, as pets last month.

The crows were dubbed Never and More, after the one-word vocabulary of Edgar Allan Poe's Raven.

SQUAWKING

Never and More have more than one word, or rather, squawk, in their vocabularies. Mrs. Manning said Saturday, "They just keep squawking all through the day," she said.

The Mannings' cat, a short-haired domestic tabby, would love to get its claws into them. "The cat jumps up at them when they are quiet, but as soon as they caw, he gets scared and runs away."

The crows are just two more pets to the Mannings' hamster. Things are getting hectic for Mrs. Manning. Never and More are learning to fly, and practicing inside the house.

They are also just learning to feed themselves. "They make a mess," Mrs. Manning observed mildly. "One dark night Never and More became restive and decided to take a stroll."

TRAPPED

They opened their cage, where they are kept at night, and one dodged out — let's call him Never.

The door sprung back, and poor More was trapped inside the cage.

Meanwhile, Never had made it up the staircase and found himself at the end of a hall. He did some sight-seeing, picked up small items in his claws and beak, squeezed them, ripped them and dropped them on the floor.

Then he toured the rooms on the upper floor, pushing doors wide open, examining and playing with anything in the rooms.

Came the dawn. "It was a mess, there were things lying all over the floors," Mrs. Manning said.

All she could do was clean up the place and scold Never. In a little while, when she tries scolding the next time, Never may talk back. The Mannings plan to teach the crows to talk.

Talks by Year-End--Taylor:

U.S. Will Blunt Red Offensive

SAIGON (UPI)—Retiring U.S. ambassador Maxwell Taylor said Saturday U.S. and South Vietnamese forces would "blunt and bloody" the Communists during the monsoon fighting now underway.

***

Bottomley

Taylor also predicted the Communists might be forced to talk peace by the end of 1965.

The former chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, who is being replaced as ambassador by Henry Cabot Lodge, the man he succeeded, said the Communists might score local, limited victories.

"BLUNT, BLOODY"

"But in terms of final victory, I would expect that we will be able to blunt and bloody this offensive so that by the end of this calendar year or the end of the monsoon fighting, Hanoi will be able to draw very little comfort from the outcome of the military operations."

"One of the primary purposes of our military operations here has been to show the leaders in Hanoi that this is a losing game," Taylor said. "They can't win in South Viet Nam and, furthermore, they're going to continue to take losses from our bombardment in the north."

"If, at the end of this rainy season, they have lost on both fronts, I would think indeed that it would be time for stocktaking in the north."

U.K. Minister Supports U.S. Policy

WEST HARTLEPOOL, England (Reuters)—A Labor government minister Saturday expressed strong support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam as the government came under strong opposition attack for lending itself to anti-American propaganda by Communist North Viet Nam.

Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley told a Labor party meeting in northeast England:

"Some people say that the Americans can stop this war. That is just what they are trying to do. In my opinion, the Americans have more justice on their side than has ever been given credit."

He said several peace-making attempts by the U.S. were turned down by the Chinese Communists, who frustrated every forward-looking step.

100,000 Men In Viet By Fall

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States plans to expand its troop strength in the South Viet Nam war to 100,000 or more by late summer or early fall, it was learned Saturday.

This calls for an increase of at least 25,000 men, including units.

Stewart Urges Neutral South

HULL, England (CP)—Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart called Saturday for a neutral South Viet Nam with no foreign troops or bases.

He also defended the Labor government's peace-making attempts.

Stewart proposed a conference as soon as possible regardless under what auspices it is called. He spoke at a rally in this northern England city.

King 'Retires' Early

CORFU, Greece (AP) — Queen Anne-Marie and her newborn daughter were reported doing very well Saturday, but King Constantine had to take to his bed, exhausted.

Early Saturday the queen, the world's youngest at 18, gave birth to a 9-pound, 11-ounce girl, who becomes heirless to the throne of Greece.

A medical bulletin said it was a normal birth "and Her Majesty and the newborn child are doing very well."

But a palace official said the king, 28, exhausted from an all-night vigil and excitement, had retired for a rest.

Constantine, wearing a surgical mask, was in the delivery room for the birth—a specially prepared room in the summer palace on this Ionian island.

Immediately afterward, Constantine telephoned Premier Georgios Papandreu in Athens, touching off a 21-gun salute and the pealing of church bells.

Dressed in an open-neck shirt and slacks, the grinning monarch hastened to the gates of the palace, where a crowd was waiting and shouting: "It's a girl!"

As church bells echoed across Corfu's green hills and valleys, people ran into the street in celebration. Congratulations flowed in from around the world.

Anne-Marie's mother, Queen Ingrid of Denmark, Constantine's mother, Queen Mother Frederika, and Crown Prince

Irene, Constantine's sister, also were present at the birth.

The queen's father, King Frederik IX of Denmark, will fly to Corfu next week to see his first grandchild.

Doctors Threaten Mass Resignations

SWANSEA, Wales (AP) — British doctors Saturday threatened a mass walkout from the national free health scheme unless they are permitted to charge consultation fees—and thus discourage hypochondriacs and malingers.

A resolution to this effect was passed by voice vote at the annual conference of the British Medical Association after one of the 500 delegates, Dr. Alan L. Bussey, told the meeting:

"NO MISTAKE"

"Let there be no mistake—the present system of free access has resulted in a national soup kitchen of health."

Representatives of the medical association have been negotiating with the health ministry for months for improved pay and working conditions.

Dr. J. C. Cameron, chairman of the BMA committee which has been carrying on the negotiations, asked the delegates:

"If I go back and say to the Health Ministry that you are insisting on such payment and the answer is again 'no' are you prepared to make this a resignation issue?"

There was a loud chorus of "yes" from the delegates.

Probers Hunt For Bits Of Bomb

100 MILE HOUSE (CP)—An intensive, detailed investigation is under way to find out what caused a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane to explode in flight over this Cariboo town.

Investigators sifting through the wreckage looked for traces of a bomb.

Investigators sifting through the wreckage looked for traces of a bomb.

The quest for the cause of the crash that killed all 52 persons aboard continues on three fronts:

● Police scientists in Vancouver, 170 miles from the crash, are examining pieces of the four-engine DC-6B that was Flight 21 out of Vancouver on Thursday.

● Pathologists at Vancouver are examining bodies, and parts of bodies, to determine whether the massive injuries indicate a specific type of force which might have brought the plane down.

● On the scene, department of transport and RCMP investigators are inspecting every piece of the plane — no matter how small.

Officials said it may be some days before the wreckage is thoroughly picked apart and other matters, such as insurance carried by passengers, are investigated.

INSURANCE LIGHT

One official report indicated insurance bought by passengers and on behalf of passengers was unusually light.

Authorities on the scene said Saturday that a preliminary investigation showed an explosion ripped the tail section from the aircraft, sending both sections 15,000 feet to the forest below.

The Men Who Built the Bomb

From Trinity to Remorse

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Klaus Fuchs, the atomic scientist spy, was also "a model baby-sitter" and sometime conga-line leader at the secret birthplace of the A-bomb in the New Mexico mountains.

Maj. Gen. Leslie Groves, paunchy quarterback of the $2,000,000,000 project to build the bomb, kept a chocolate bar in his safe along with his secret documents—for emergency use if his dieting determination weakened.

Two army officers assigned aboard the cruiser Indianapolis to transport the precious Uranium-235 explosive to Tinian in the Pacific for the assembling of the Hiroshima bomb had orders that, if the ship sank, "they were to save their cargo before any human life . . . the first life raft would go to the U-235."

Dedicate seismographs, consigned to record earth-tremors from the world's first atomic bomb test in the New Mexico desert near Alamogordo on July 16, 1945, rode by train from Boston to Albuquerque on soft Pullman berths lest they get damaged.

These and many other side-lights of the historic birth of the bomb are related in a new book Day of Trinity (published by Atheneum). It records the events leading up to, and including, the code-named "Trinity" test of the first A-bomb. The 20th anniversary of the test occurs Monday.

The book was written by Lansing Lamont, a 35-year-old Washington correspondent for

The barber, Howard G. Morford, about 50, was shot in the back as he tried to help a customer already wounded. Morford stumbled across the street and died on the steps of a tavern.

A cab driver, Mrs. Genevieve V. Jennings, 52, was shot earlier. She was in critical condition at a Vancouver hospital.

The customers wounded were Dennis Charles Jones, 18, of Battle Ground, Wash., in critical condition with a stomach wound, and Edgar Allen Waser, 20, of La Center, Wash., in serious condition with a wound in the upper leg.

Police held John Frederick Anderson, 20, a sophomore in journalism at Pepperdine College in Los Angeles, for questioning.

Police gave this account:

A taxi was called to a Vancouver motel and Mrs. Jennings, whose husband Stanley owns the De Luxe City Cab Co., responded. The rider shot Mrs. Jennings four times and stole the cab.

north of Vancouver, the taxi was spotted and a 100-mile-per-hour pursuit by police began. "The cab missed a curve and crashed into the barber shop. The driver jumped out and shot Jones twice with a .22-calibre pistol.

When Morford tried to carry Jones to safety, he was shot in the back as he left the shop. Waser also was wounded as he tried to escape.

Marshall Hal Huffstutler of Battle Ground fired two bullets into the shop where the gunman hid behind the barber chair. The man threw up his hands, kicked out a window and surrendered. Anderson was booked for homicide.

Jibe Draws Rebuke From Premier Shaw

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Shaw of Prince Edward Island said Saturday Municipal Affairs Minister Daniel Campbell of British Columbia should be pitted on his lack of knowledge of Canada outside his own province.

Mr. Campbell said Friday Prime Minister Pearson's announcement of a $148,000,000 causeway-tunnel-bridge link between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick was a "political boondoggle to a potato patch."

Premier Shaw said the B.C. minister knew little of the needs of other parts of Canada.

"He should come here and meet some of the people and study economic conditions."

Better still, Mr. Campbell should talk to some of the tourists from British Columbia who have enjoyed visits to Prince Edward Island, the premier said.

Mr. Campbell demanded federal aid to subsidize the B.C. ferry system between Vancouver Island and mainland B.C.

Rural Crossing Truck-Train Collision Kills Nine

MAXTON, N.C. (AP) — An Atlantic Coast Line Railroad freight train struck a pickup truck carrying a baseball team near this southeastern North Carolina town Saturday, killing nine of the 10 persons in the truck.

The accident occurred at a rural crossing north of Maxton. All the victims, members of a Lumbie Indian baseball team, were believed to be from the Maxton area.

Mangled bodies were strewn over the track. The lone survivor, Anguish Blue, 31, of Maxton, was taken to a nearby Laurinburg hospital in critical condition with head and chest injuries. He was believed to be the driver of the truck.

SAIGON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky Saturday charged that war profiteers are undermining his government, the ninth since the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963. The youthful premier, commander of South Viet Nam's Air Force, already has said he will have such persons shot.

Two MiGs Blasted Near China Border

Air Force Makes First Kill

SAIGON (UPI) — Two U.S. air force F4C Phantom jets using air-to-air missiles Saturday shot down two Communist MIG-17 fighters 70 miles from the border of Communist China during the deepest U.S. aerial penetration of North Viet Nam to date.

It was the first "kill" for U.S. Air Force planes since the Korean war. Three MIGs, downed previously over North Viet Nam, were bagged by navy pilots from U.S. seventh fleet carriers.

The dogfight took place 75 miles northwest of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital, during one of 11 missions in the area by American planes. The F4Cs and six air force F105 Thunderchief jets also attacked the Yen Sen ammunition depot and several bridges with rockets and bombs.

ON RADAR — During a morning bombing attack on Yen Sen pilots saw three unidentified MIGs but the Communist planes fled.

A U.S. military spokesman said the 1,200-mile-an-hour F4Cs were flying cover at 25,000 feet for the F105s this afternoon when they detected the enemy MIGs on radar.

The MIGs attacked with cannon fire and the air force planes turned loose their air-to-air rockets. One MIG went "straight down" and the other exploded and dropped through a cloud bank, the spokesman said.

JET ACES — America's newest jet ace later was identified as Capt. Kenneth Holcombe of Detroit, Mich., and Capt. Donald C. Anderson of Fairbanks, Alaska.

aboard one plane — and Capt. Thomas S. Roberts of La Grange, Ga., and Capt. Arthur C. Clark of McAllen, Tex., flying the other.

Two air force jets were shot down early this year when MIGs swooped down out of a cloud bank cover and surprised the bomb-laden American planes.

OLD MODELS — The MIG-17 is one of the older models of the Soviet-built jet fighter.

The series began with the MIG-15 and has progressed to the MIG-21. The Communist planes shot down Saturday presumably were flown by North Vietnamese pilots. It was not known whether they came from the direction of Hanoi or the Chinese border.

At Hanoi

Missile Sites Boosted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five sites for anti-aircraft missiles are being prepared in the vicinity of Hanoi, the capital of North Viet Nam.

This is one more than the figure used by a U.S. state department spokesman last week.

It was learned that the five sites are in position to guard Hanoi from U.S. air attack. The state department also mentioned Haiphong, a major port about 55 miles East of Hanoi, as guarded by such missile sites.

SPOTTED — For the most part, the sites spotted by U.S. reconnaissance aircraft are ranged South of Hanoi, about 15 miles away.

With their slant range of about 35 miles, this gives the city such protection extending close to 40 miles.

U.S. authorities are not concerned about these sites, considering them of minor importance unless a decision is made to strike at Hanoi itself—which is considered unlikely for political reasons.

SUBMARINE — So far U.S. bombers have come no closer than 40 miles to the North Vietnamese capital in the almost daily raids which began in early February.

It is not certain whether Russians are doing the missile site preparation work, although the assumption is that they are there as they were at similar anti-aircraft missile bases in Cuba.

RISK — It was learned also that the presence of Russian soldiers or technicians at these anti-aircraft missile sites would not save those sites if the United States determined it was necessary to knock them out.

Such a Russian presence would not be a deterrent, as has been supposed by some observers who believe the United States would hesitate to risk a clash with the Soviet Union and thus would avoid killing Russians helping the North Vietnamese.

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — America's Mariner-4 space camera is closing for an historic attempt Wednesday to photographically shave a 125-mile-wide swath of mystery from the mottled red face of the planet Mars.

Mariner-4, the world's first interplanetary television station, will go to work in earnest at 8:24 p.m. (EDT) Wednesday when its "eye," wearing a 36-power telescope to see better, opens for the first time.

For 35 minutes thereafter, if all goes well, its field of view will sweep from Northwest to Southeast, taking in the brilliant scenery of a Martian "oasis," three deserts, one of the planet's so-called "seas" and perhaps the fringes of its receding south polar cap.

Mariner-4 was rigged to snap 21 pictures, each about 125 miles wide. Scientists were willing to guarantee that, barring a hitch, they will get at least 17 photographs back to Earth—perhaps including the first good look at the Martian "canals" that have puzzled astronomers for 60 years.

Lakeview Riot

Convicts Hunted

Police Saturday watched Island ferry terminals to prevent any bid to reach the mainland by four escapees from Lakeview open prison.

The four, who include 19-year-old James Oliver Erdman of Victoria, got away early Friday.

Erdman, of 4524 West Saanich Road, was serving an 18-month sentence for breaking, entering and theft. The other three were: Stanley Herron, 20, of North Burnaby; Philip Smith, 18, of Vancouver, and George Conklin, 23, of New Westminster.

All were serving less than two-year terms.

Meanwhile, repercussions were continuing from a riot in the prison last month, with additional jail sentences meted out to convicted participants.

Saturday in Campbell River magistrate's court Earlring Warrilow of Nelson was sentenced to two years less one day on a charge of taking part in a riot. A charge against him of causing mischief was dismissed.

Three other inmates were sentenced earlier this week. They were: George Mann of Terrace and Desmond Ballard of Kingston, Ont., who both received terms of two years less one day definite in the young offenders unit and two years less one day indefinite on charges of causing mischief and taking part in a riot.

RIOT CHARGE

Bruce Michael Bird of Nanaimo received a sentence of two years less one day definite on the riot charge and two years less one day indefinite on charges of causing mischief and taking part in a riot.

Two juveniles have been remanded until their parents can appear.

The riot caused widespread damage to camp buildings and equipment but no injuries were reported. Fourteen juvenile offenders were removed to the maximum security institution at Colquhoun following the riot.

Peace Prize Winner

Pauling Encourages Comox Peace Group

COURTENAY — Nobel Peace Prize winner Dr. Linus Pauling has congratulated Comox Project '65 peace workers for their efforts in Victoria and at Comox to "produce nuclear disarmament."

Project '65 has released the text of the letter from Dr. Pauling sent to John Simpson of Victoria, a participant in the project.

PAULING PLEASED

"I am pleased to learn about the activity of you and others in Victoria in the endeavor to produce nuclear disarmament, and especially about your plans for a demonstration to be held in front of the main gate of the Canadian Air Force base at Comox July 18, 1965."

"I am sorry to say my schedule is such that I cannot address the meeting.

"I send my best wishes to you in your efforts to achieve peace in the world. The tragic events in Viet Nam emphasize the immorality of national government and the possibility that an immediate, unprovoked war may, through interference of the great powers, grow into a nuclear war that might mean the end of civilization."

"I believe the time has come now when we are forced to eliminate war from the world, and that it is the duty of every human being to contribute to the fight against war and for its replacement by a system of world law based upon the principals of justice and morality."

Wednesday, July 14, a mass rally will be held in Courtenay at Lewis Park. It will begin at 8 p.m.

A full description and explanation of Project '65 will be given with plans for July 18 and the rest of summer discussed. A hootenanny will follow the speakers.

July 18 action at the RCAF station planned by Project '65 will begin at 1 p.m. and continue through the afternoon until 7 p.m.

All participants have been asked to meet at 12:30 p.m. in the parking lot across from the main entrance to the base, where final briefing will be conducted. Another briefing meeting will be held Saturday, July 17.

Club Blasts Oyster Men

NANAIMO—Concern was expressed Saturday by Bob Pedersen of Nanaimo Fish and Game Club, at the decreasing number of wild oysters on beaches here.

He named Nanos Bay and Piper's Lagoon as two locations where wild oysters are being gathered by commercial growers by the bag load, but are also close to population centres and easily accessible.

Hungry Moths Attack Poisonous Ragwort

Moth lays eggs

NANAIMO—Three thousand hungry cinnabar moths are now gobbling up the dreaded tansy ragwort, a weed infesting farms south of Nanaimo.

The larva of the moths was released last week, by federal biologists from Vancouver. Another 3,000 moths were released last year in an experimental venture to see if they would ease the problem. Last year five cattle died from eating the poisonous weed, which causes liver ailment.

For the past 50 years the cinnabar moth has been used to control the weed in England, but only recently has the method been tried in this part of Canada.

The Nanaimo area has the most successful cinnabar colonies anywhere in the country.

The moths have an invaluable asset: The weed is their only food, and when tansy ragwort is eliminated the moths die of starvation.

Joe Garner, Richardson Road, on whose property the moths have been released, said there were other ways of eliminating the weed, such as spraying and extensive cultivation.

Moths will eat the weed along rough logging roads, in rough pasture, or beneath power lines, all places where it is hard to spray.

In one location in B.C. tansy ragwort is deliberately grown at UBC where the moths are bred to meet the demands of the farmers.

Tansy Ragwort is not a native plant. Mr. Garner said it is believed the weed was brought to Vancouver Island in hay from either northwest Washington or England.

Once growth is started it will kill off all other vegetation with its exceptionally strong roots, while the plant can grow to five feet from the ground.

In England the plant is known as "stinking Willie", while in Australia it has the colorful name of "yellow peril."

Mr. Garner is weed control officer for this area and he urged the general public to co-operate by killing all tansy ragwort plants they might have in their gardens, because one plant is capable of throwing out 150,000 seeds.

He said the weed is not harmful to humans because it must be eaten consistently for a week before it is fatal.

Unfortunately when cattle feed on the weed they become addicted.

Police Try Again

Kidnap Victim Can't Say Who Did It

LADYSMITH — A second RCMP interview with Mrs. J. A. Knight has turned up no new information on the man who abducted her Tuesday.

Insp. George MacKay, officer commanding, Victoria subdivision, said Mrs. Knight was not able to give a description of the two men who abducted her from her home at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, tied her hands, and left her under boards and rubble in a wooded area on the Knight property.

MANY POLICEMEN

Insp. MacKay said many police officers remain in the Ladysmith area checking every lead. "We have received some tips from the public, and every one is being checked out," said Insp. MacKay.

But he added "I don't know how much help they will be."

The 52-year-old woman was

Plant Death Mystery

Labor Group Asks Full Investigation

PORT ALBERNI — Alberni and District Labor Council has asked for a thorough investigation by the provincial agriculture department into charges that plants are dying mysteriously here.

The council has written Agriculture Minister Frank Richter claiming that a recent investigation was neither proper nor thorough.

The move was prompted by charges of a nurseryman that pulp mill fallout may be causing the death of plants.

A report of the investigation said severe winter damage weakened many plants and there was no evidence that pulp mill fallout was killing plants.

Nurseryman Colin Wilson said he would continue to press for a full-scale investigation. He said he may ask all affected gardeners to take samples of dying plants to city hall.

Mayor Les Hammer said he would welcome an investigation to "clear the air" but he said he knew little about horticulture.

Old Flag Still Tops For Nanaimo Veteran

By PETER TAYLOR

NANAIMO—The flag controversy may now be buried, but a battle-scarred veteran on Bowen Road still insists on running the Union Jack up every day on the tall flagpole in his garden.

George Dobbs, 68, a veteran of two world wars, said, "Lots of people have remarked on me flying it, but I've yet to hear anybody condemn it."

"I'm proud of it and I always will be. It represents the things I have accomplished."

ALL LINKED

In Mr. Dobbs' mind the Red Ensign, the navy's White Ensign and the Union Jack are all linked, and he said he wouldn't have minded the new maple leaf flag one bit if only it had contained a bit of the Union Jack.

He is hoping that if ever the Liberal government is defeated a plebiscite will be held to "get the view of the people so that they can decide whether they want the flag we've got now or go back to what we had."

Although born in England, Mr. Dobbs is no dyed-in-the-wool anglophile. He came to Canada as a young boy in 1906 with his parents, and homesteaded until he moved to his present address in Nanaimo.

In 1915 he enlisted in the 10th Battalion with his brothers, Edgar and Frank at North Battleford, Sask., but the Dobbs brothers only remained together until they reached England, where George was transferred to the 46th.

He took part in the battle of Vimy Ridge and served 14 months continuously in the front line, up to two days before the armistice.

LAST DAYS

The last two days of the war instilled in George Dobbs his fierce love for the Union Jack. He was transferred to a military hospital at Exeter and given the task of burying the wounded who had died and had been placed in the hospital morgue.

Placed in charge of 12 men and assigned the services of a chaplain, his detail worked from early morning to supper time, burying in a mass grave members of the forces.

INSTRUCTOR

Mr. Dobbs said the dead were covered only with an army blanket, some form of identification and one other item, the Union Jack.

When the Second World War broke out, George again enlisted and became a sergeant instructor in the Canadian Scottish. After six months he was transferred to the RCAF in a similar position and served across Canada.

TRADITION

Wounded in the thigh at Vimy Ridge and now crippled with arthritis, he spends the time in his garden in Northfield or acting as general watchdog for his five daughters and seven grandchildren, who all live in the Nanaimo area.

Mr. Dobbs says if the time ever comes that it is a disgrace to fly the Union Jack then he is going to get out his rifle again and start shooting.

"It's the tradition I support, and that's something value can't be put on."

Saltair Voters Say No

NORTH COWICHAN — Saltair voters spoke decisively on the question of whether they would like to join North Cowichan, in a vote last night. The answer is no.

The vote among residents of the unorganized area brought out 343 of a possible 600 voters.

Yes votes totalled 77, no votes 265.

North Cowichan was prepared to take the Saltair area in, but after opposition was expressed in Saltair, the provincial government ordered the vote.

"The result was just what we expected," North Cowichan Reeve Donald Morton said Saturday.

If amalgamation had been approved, North Cowichan services would have been extended gradually into Saltair. Voting was conducted by municipal officers of North Cowichan.

Integration Coming To Kindergarten

By JOY HUNTLEY

CAMPBELL RIVER—The effects of segregation of Indian children will be met by school board here with a kindergarten pilot program next year.

The kindergarten classes will mix white and Indian children, and allow them to adjust to one another before school begins.

Trustees reversed their previous stand on kindergartens, which would have rejected the classes and used the extra space and staff to promote a lower pupil-teacher ratio.

POLICY CHANGE

The change in policy followed a meeting with Chief Councillor Dave Moon of Cape Mudge Indian Band, and two other councillors.

Mr. Moon told the board children raised on an Indian reserve suffer to some extent from segregation and they often drop behind white companions in early school years, during a period of readjustment.

He asked that kindergartens be established to help these children before they reach grade one.

START THIS FALL

The board agreed, and will start the classes in September on Quadra Island and in Elm School area.

The Elm kindergartens will aid Indian children on the Quinsam reserve in Campbell River.

The board stressed these kindergartens must have enrollment of both white and Indian children to succeed.

ALL ADMISSIBLE

All children five years of age are admissible, regardless of racial descent.

School trustees also considered another step to further the aims of better education for district Indians.

The board will look into the possibility of sending a qualified adult to Cape Mudge on Quadra Island, to help Indian teenagers.

TO HELP PUPILS

This teacher would assist the youngsters with their homework several nights each week during the school term.

This move was also requested by the Cape Mudge band council.

Mr. Moon told the board: "It has not been the policy of senior governments in the past to encourage Indians to proceed in education."

He said as a result Indian parents are not able to help their children with homework, a common practice of white parents.

Impaired Fine

COURTENAY — Ronald Paul Maassen, appeared before Magistrate John Ryland Saturday and was fined $125 and prohibited from driving for the next three months for impaired driving.

Maassen is a member of the United States Air Force, stationed at Comox.

Expert Judges

NANAIMO — Highland games Saturday were judged by James L. McKenzie of Victoria. He is an expert in highland dancing, having captured the world championship three straight years, from 1951 through 1953.

SOINTULA—The valedictorian in recent high school graduation ceremonies on Malcolm Island was killed late Friday night in a motorcycle accident.

Kenneth Lawrence Wilman, 17, a top student and member of the senior boys basketball team during the last term, died in a crash at Sointula.

Wilman was travelling from Rough Bay to Sointula on Malcolm Island, and crashed with a car as he rounded a curve.

A STUDENT

He graduated from Malcolm Island elementary secondary school this year. He was an A student, who made extra money during the year by hand-logging. Wilman floated several booms during the year, and planned to work for another year before going to university.

BORROWED CYCLE

The motorcycle was an older model which he had borrowed from his best friend, Tarmo Pakkalen.

He is survived by his parents Mr. and Mrs. Lauri Wilman of Sointula, brother Charles, 21, and sister Mrs. Eileen Woodbridge.

Militiamen To Train In Victoria

Work Point barracks will be home to 175 members of the student militia from all over B.C., starting next weekend.

The program begins July 19 and continues for five weeks. Graduation parade will be held Aug. 18 with an inspection by Maj.-Gen. J. M. Rockingham, general officer commanding, Western Command.

Officer commanding of the camp will be Major Murray Edwards, 209 Anson. Chief instructor will be Capt. Ronald MacLean, 945 Cent.

Old Pros Win Logging Sports

By MARGARET TREBETT

PORT ALBERNI—Caulk boots and experience triumphed at the Elks Loggers Sports Saturday, when professional Art Williams found himself pitted against barefoot amateurs in the log-burial event in the civic pool.

He won the event after ducking Trevor Jones, Jim Jehanyi, and finally Gordon Taylor, then went on to field sports in which he gave defending champion Alan Woodrow competition for the best all-round logger title and the IWA Local 1-35 trophy.

But Woodrow won again with 15 points to Williams' 13. Woodrow won the tree-chopping event, with Williams as runner-up and Woodrow's son, Danny, comes, third.

But Amateurs Give Them Competition

VICTORIA, B.C., SUNDAY, JULY 11, 1965

ROSE LOVER Linda Brookes admires bloom in Oak Bay Rose Garden. See Oak Bay Roses on Page 12.—W. A. BOUCHER.

A woman whose ambition to see the world has been frustrated through the years by political revolutions in Europe and South America is taking a big financial gamble to build a new world for herself in Victoria.

Hungarian-born sculptress Mrs. Rosalie Vitarius plans to open a private art gallery this October in a Centennial Square shop leased from the city of Victoria at $350 per month for five years.

Risks which the determined widow will have to take for her new venture include placing a second mortgage on her home at 1247 Goldstream Avenue and giving up her job in a plywood mill here to devote full time to the art business.

"Yes, it is quite a gamble. I am really afraid but still I hope I will do it very well," says Mrs. Vitarius, who has had previous business experience in owning and operating a pharmacy in Venezuela.

A private art gallery will be in keeping, she says, with the theme of the area. "Centennial Square, I think, is the most beautiful part of Victoria. Everything will be in harmony in the square, the buildings, fountain, elegant restaurant and stores, the theatre.

"It is a proper place to show art, real art. You could not for example open an art gallery on Fort or Douglas Streets because on a business-like street it would lose its significance, no?" Mrs. Vitarius said, her rich Hungarian accent punctuating the English which she learned after her arrival in Canada in March, 1960.

She also speaks Spanish, French and German, the latter of which she has nearly forgotten: "Even if somebody speaks German I just hear half because now it becomes so strange and far away."

"But there, in Centennial Square, where people are going to the theatre or the restaurant, they always prepare themselves to get out from their common life, out for a better living, you see what I mean," she said.

"And then there is the art gallery. I will have it open Saturdays and Fridays in the night until 11 o'clock because people going with friends to dinner or the theatre are dressed and want to enjoy.

"I do not mean that someone who is well dressed will appreciate art more than someone who is not, but that a well dressed person is psychologically prepared for something better than common, if you see what I mean.

"It will not be like just any store, with a clerk asking, 'Can I help you' while expecting you to be already on your way out," she said.

"It will be everything a person needs. If somebody asks me something I will be pleased and willing to speak about what he wants. If I cannot give a correct or proper explanation I will ask the artist. It is teaching, too—an art gallery develops the esthetic self of everybody," she said.

"Many visitors will come to City Hall. I am sure they will go around the square and look at this and that, and I hope they will drop in to my store. If somebody passes a painting or an object of art but don't buy, later on he will remember and if he has the money for a more expensive gift or for something for a new house he will come back."

The gallery will be a new outlet for British Columbia artists and no foreign works will be displayed there. "We have in British Columbia artists whose quality is equal to or better than that of foreign artists who get $10,000 to $20,000 in Toronto or Montreal for a painting," said Mrs. Vitarius.

"I want to make it a real gallery where everyone can be sure he is getting authentic, good art which can be considered an investment. In B.C., there are artists whose works in a few years will be worth 10 or 20 times the current value—in the meantime, you can enjoy the art and it reflects your aspirations for better harmony with beauty around you."

This is the thinking of the woman who is taking a plunge into the art gallery business in Centennial Square, the woman from Baja, Hungary, whose earlier years were dominated by political upheavals in other parts of the world.

Rosalie, the youngest of five children of a Hungarian architect, completed two years of university at the provincial capital of Baja, before marrying a young doctor, Julius Vitarius, and deciding to move to Africa to see part of the world.

The young couple moved to Belgium, where they both learned French during his nearly two years' of specialization in tropical medicine. But after Julius completed his studies and had already contracted to serve as doctor for a religious group's settlement near Leopoldville, it was July, 1933, and the German war machine was threatening Europe.

In the face of war, the contract for the African medical post fell through. Rosalie wanted to be back with her family, so they returned to Hungary where they remained throughout the war.

In 1945, the doctor and his wife moved to Paris, attempted to gain entry to Canada but were unable to get clearance before their money ran out. They had lived seven months in Paris on Napoleons, French gold money which Julius had bought during the war years in Hungary. It was in Paris that Rosalie studied clay modelling for six months.

With their money nearly gone, the couple then moved in November, 1946, to Venezuela, where Julius worked as a doctor for the government and Rosalie opened a pharmacy, spending her spare time studying the art of the ancient South American Indians. Rosalie, deeply impressed by the functionally designed art objects decorated with the human form, soon was turning out her own interpretation of Indian art.

Eventually the tropical climate became so depressing to the Europeans that they decided to move to North America. The doctor preceded his wife by 2½ years, sending for her after he had completed additional medical studies in Toronto and become an interne in a hospital in Victoria.

Meanwhile, a revolution had taken place in Venezuela. "The president was ousted from the country and the socialists or almost communists took over." The new group brought in drastic social reforms, slashed retail drug prices to less than their wholesale cost, while doubling the salaries of pharmaceutical staff and ordering no layoffs in staff, Mrs. Vitarius recalls.

She sold the pharmacy in Caracas for a small portion of its actual value and joined her husband in Victoria in March, 1960. They bought a home at Langford Lake so they could have waterfront property, and Julius died of cancer in September, 1960.

Mrs. Vitarius, just starting to learn English, went to work as a spotter in a plywood mill. She was so impressed with the powerful bodies and rhythmical movement of people in the mill that her own sculpturing now reflects west coast Canadian life in place of her earlier primitive art forms.

Some of her own works eventually will be displayed in her new art gallery but exhibits of other people's work will come first. She expects her shop will be ready for occupancy by late September and arranged for her first showing an exhibit of oil paintings by Maxwell Bates, a member of the Canadian Group of Painters.

the STREET

By VIVIENNE

Long years ago, gentlemen for whom Streets were named in the same happy juncture two thoroughfares today were frequently at loggerheads.

The story of James Yates to this city, is well known much so is that of his occasional opponent—James Yates.

Yates was born in Kirtland and English parents, and via a sailing-ship around the world during the 1830's. He became a businessman, a builder, saloon owner, and things as well.

The property he owned in Port Victoria for long of country and is today this was the area along the foot of the street which here he erected the first had seen.

He was responsible work there, too, and it seriously noted the fact that Street is wider than the present, and wondered what James Yates had in mind the public squares in even the British Isles, and for the new island village large enough.

He must have been a man. When it became obvious the Yates Block, on Wharf access to what eventual public landing, Yates was culminated throughout the town to the then Mayor J. H. T. he wished no unfair advantage, and was therefore the town land adequate waterfront, and to pay for wooden sidewalk for the town to keep this in proper repair the corporation should contribute.

This is a little different now today, but then it was years ago the public water's edge with broken wax paper, or have trans all night.

Be that as it may, the the busiest area of all, and passenger ships, so that a vital one, and was recognized man who owned the adjacent a member of the first in later was one of the original building of the Royal.

One other building in for which James Yates slightly different background that he and Mr. Douglas, Hudson's Bay Company, to eye. The story behind family is that on one occasion pleased with the trading made with the Indians for brought these in, skilled to get set up as a sort of outlet the usual beads and trinkets.

Yates blew up. "It's at Douglas. Why don't you

YATES and DOUGLAS OFTEN ARGUED

BEHIND the STREETS

By VIVIANNE CHADWICK

Long years ago, it seems that the gentlemen for whom Yates and Douglas Streets were named did not always exist in the same happy juxtaposition as do the two thoroughfares today. In fact the men were frequently at loggerheads.

The story of James Douglas, in his relation to this city, is well known. Perhaps not quite so much so is that of his contemporary—and occasional opponent—James Yates.

Yates was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland, of Scotch and English parents, and came to the new world, via a sailing-ship around the Horn, probably some time during the 1830's. He was the vessel's carpenter, but when he reached this island port he became businessman, real estate operator, builder, saloon owner, and possibly several other things as well.

The property he owned before he had been in Port Victoria for long, covered a wide stretch of country and is today worth millions. Part of this was the area along the waterfront at the foot of the street which bears his name, and here he erected the first stone building the city had seen.

He was responsible for other construction work there, too, and if anyone has ever consciously noted the fact that "his reach of Yates Street is wider than the portion east of Government, and wondered why, the reason is that James Yates had in mind the open-air markets in the public squares in every sizable town throughout the British Isles, and planned the same thing for the new island village when it should grow large enough.

He must have been a fair and public-spirited man. When it became obvious that his property, the Yates Block, on Wharf Street, was impeding access to what eventually was required as a public landing, Yates wrote and caused to be circulated throughout the town a notice addressed to the then Mayor J. H. Turner, to the effect that he wished no unfair advantage over his fellow citizens, and was therefore prepared to donate to the town land adequate for an approach to the waterfront, and to pay for the construction of a wooden sidewalk for the use of the public and to keep this in proper repair until such time as the corporation should construct a roadway.

This is a little different from the attitude one sees today, but then it must be admitted that 125 years ago the public probably didn't litter the water's edge with broken bottles, beer cans and wax paper, or have transistors on at full volume all night.

Be that as it may, the harbor of those days was the busiest area of all, full of whalers, cargo and passenger ships, so the matter of access was a vital one, and was recognized as such by the man who owned the adjacent land. Yates was also a member of the first legislative assembly, and later was one of the original contributors toward the building of the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

One other building in the waterfront vicinity for which James Yates was responsible had a slightly different background. It has been stated that he and Mr. Douglas, then manager for the Hudson's Bay Company, did not always see eye to eye. The story handed down in the Yates family is that on one occasion Mr. Yates was not pleased with the trading arrangements being made with the Indians for their furs. The natives brought these in, spilt them on an army bayonet set up as a sort of out-size file, and were given the usual beads and trinkets in exchange.

Yates blew up. "It's a dirty deal," he snorted at Douglas. "Why don't you stick up another bay-

The growth or decline of the main streets of a city often tell the story of its progress. Shortly after the turn of the century it was expected that Victoria's Government Street would always be its primary artery. But it didn't turn out that way. Gradually Douglas Street was taken over by the biggest and busiest merchants, with the coincident blocks of Yates Street flourishing accordingly.

THE FIRST James Yates

onet and spike an equal number of Bay blankets on it, and pay your trappers with those!"

Apparently this was but one of many heated disagreements. If Yates came off second-best in this one, he later got even in his own way. He built a pub on the corner of Yates and Wharf Streets, which he called Ship Inn, imported a hefty cargo of whisky, and charged Douglas and his cohorts $1 a glass. He was promptly given the appellation of "that black-faced Scotchman!"

Yates didn't care. He went back to England. In fact he made several trips back and forth, and in the meantime married and raised a good-sized family—four girls and two boys. And he bought considerable property out of town, notably the stretch along the Gorge which is bounded on its three sides by the Little Gorge Bridge and Tillamook Road, Burnside, and Harriet Road. This last he named for one of the four daughters.

Harriet herself was born in a sailing ship which had just arrived with the Yates family from the old country, and was at anchor off Royal Roads, outside the lagoon, waiting until there should be wharf space. But Harriet couldn't wait.

Later, when she was old enough to go to school, she was the first white child to attend Craigflower, that pioneer landmark beside the bridge of the same name. She boarded there, and at weekends was paddled up and down the Gorge waterway from her home on Wharf Street, by an Indian in a canoe.

Irina Street, also off Burnside, was originally Emma Street, and was named for the second daughter.

When the older boy, James Stuart Yates, was about seven years of age, the father took his family back to England once more and this time he remained there. The boy grew up, went to both Edinburgh and London Universities, took a degree in law, and came back to Victoria to establish, with a partner, the firm of Yates & Jay. He acted as agent for his father's interests, which were still extensive. Further property had been acquired, some of it noted in a quaint old Bill of Sale which refers to the area as part of "Vancouver's Island Colony," and which lists some 34½ acres being disposed of at a price of $8 13s 9d or about $40 for the lot. Later on the young lawyer bought, on orders from his distant father, a parcel of land in the Metchoin district for $3 an acre. Today gravel from that same chunk of real estate costs $4 a yard!

For some time, a bachelor, he lived by himself on a portion of the Gorge property, in a house which he built there and which he called Craigilee 'arm — and which he presently managed to burn down while hatching some hen's eggs in a home-made incubator! In due course he married the daughter of another pioneer family, Miss Annie Austin, (Austin Avenue, also in the vicinity of the Gorge, originates with them) and raised a family of three sons, of which the sole survivor today is James Austin Stuart Yates, of 2780 Millstream Road, Langford.

His father, says the current Yates, was a man with odd little foibles. One of these concerned the year of his birth, which was 1857. So, in all his books, instead of inscribing his name on the first page as most of us do, he always wrote half his name on page 18, and the rest on page 57! I was shown an ancient umbrella, on the handle of which is a series of cuts indicating the same date. The family archives include a mass of century-old deeds, bills, handbills, receipts and letters, the latter in the fine Spencerian script of that bygone age.

Today's James Yates, married, with two grown daughters, and now retired, has had a varied career. He was born at Craigilee Farm, went to England when he was 16, and finished his education there. When the war came along he went into munitions, and worked at the famous Woolrich Arsenal. They wouldn't take him for active duty abroad because of an earlier illness and operation, a spectacular typhoid case which rocked some eight different doctors and caused a whole series of special medical lectures.

This illness, he thinks, probably affected the entire course of his life, and, of course, his choice of occupations, so that over the years he has worked in many fields. He returned to B.C. in 1929, and became a government surveyor.

The cottage on Millstream Road, which sits on land which came to Yates from his father, is of ancient and attractive stone construction, and sits well back from the rural road, as buildings of that earlier era, whose occupants thought privacy important, invariably did. It's a sleepy little garden, old-fashioned, and with a lavishly fragrant honeysuckle climbing here and there . . . something you don't often see, nowadays. Beagle, the 14-year-old fox terrier, and Paul, the grey and white cat, greeted me courteously, and then went to sleep, too.

So, over a cup of coffee, I heard about the first and the second James Yates. This third one won't talk much about himself or his contributions to the locale. His wife explained: "He's very modest." I think he must be.

OUTDOOR SPORT—indoor pastime. George West at work in home workshop.—Robin Clarke.

The Sunday afternoon was dull and drizzly with no promise from the weatherman that conditions would improve. Biting cold winds swept across Juan de Fuca Strait towards Dallas Road beach from the snow-capped Olympic Mountains, and the sea was in an ugly mood. I stood on the beach with the winds tearing out my hair and the leaves of my note-book, waiting to interview members of the Victoria Rockhound Club who were on one of their regular weekend scrambles.

I was invited to do an on-the-spot research into this fascinating hobby that is sweeping the country. Despite the inclement weather a dozen or more carloads of carefree men, women and children attired in slacks, heavy jackets, or Indian sweaters, and rubber boots, descended on the Dallas Beach. Nearly every one was armed with a rockhound hammer—called a prospector's pick, or some other sharp-pointed implement, a knapsack or a burlap bag, a whistle, and a paper-bag of refreshments.

Shivering from cold I sought refuge behind a boulder in order to observe them as they ran up and down the beach digging feverishly here and there into the wet sand. Eager to learn something about what was going on I cornered George West, who was then president of the club, and he very graciously consented to answer my questions.

He told me a great deal about the club's background and activities, and explained that the purpose of this field trip was to collect attractive beach pebbles for tumbling.

Dallas Road Beach he informed me is a good collecting spot for a variety of minerals and stones such as glacial rock, conglomerates, quartz, basal, 'lo-ving gabbro, variegated jasper, agates, rhodonite, and most interesting of all, the dark green Dallasite. He pointed to a pin he was wearing—it was the club's emblem carved out of Dallasite, with an outline of the province of British Columbia overlaid with a rock-hammer.

"How do you know when a stone is good?" I enquired.

"Just lick it like this," he replied, and he picked up a pebble off the beach and licked it. "A wet stone is easier to examine than a dry one." The term rockhound was derived from the sniffing and licking of a dog," he explained.

Then he went on to tell me about jade—that dark green tough rock which sometimes rivals diamonds, and wrapped up in folklore. The Kraft Company he said had published a book titled Adventures in Jade, and he suggested that I read materials used are wet grits, plaster of paris, tin oxide, and abrasives. All these items involve an outlay of hundreds, in some cases thousands of dollars. "Rocks in their heads" was my first impression.

But as I delved deeper into the subject I discovered that as hobby, rock-collecting is absorbing, educational, and can prove profitable at times. What fascinated me most were the many cabinets and cases full of mounted jewelry such as earrings, bracelets, rings, cufflinks, brooches, pendants, key rings, hole tiepins, and other articles such as vases, ash trays, jewelry boxes, lamps, paperweights, spheres, bookends, desk sets and tables.

All these were transformed from ugly, dull-looking chunks of rock, and small stones into glamorous gems by the skilful hands of the rock collectors and lapidaries. One member in particular designed and constructed an attractive and elab-

It. A jade ring offered by the company for merit was a most coveted award. That was my initiation into the wonderful world of rocks.

But the full impact of the hobby, and the operation of rockhound clubs and their activities came weeks later when I located some of the club members and decided to do a fact-finding survey. This involved many days and nights spent visiting homes, basements, and workshops where small, large, and sometimes fabulous collections were on view.

Rockhounds are the most friendly and hospitable people in the world. Next to working on the rocks and pebbles their greatest delights are talking about them, and showing them to visitors. As soon as I appeared at the door and introduced myself as a freelance writer I got the red carpet treatment.

"Sure, come right in and make yourself at home. Would you like to see my collection?"

That was the invitation to a session which lasted three or four hours looking at, and discussing minerals, crystals, semi-precious stones, pebbles of every color, shape and size from a pea up, and fossils of shells, clams, beetles, dinosaur bones, ribs, teeth, and also petrified wood found on Vancouver Island and elsewhere. A specimen which usually attracted attention was a slice of thunder-egg, with all its gay coloring. Highlight of each visit was a trip to the basement which serves as workshop with all their machinery, and tools, and store-room for an assortment of roughly-hewn chunks of rocks, and beach stones collected from remote places in this province, and the U.S.A. Some equipment is simple and home-made, some is elaborate—depending on the financial position of the amateur rockhound.

These hobbyists delight in demonstrating their 10-inch diameter diamond saws, grinders, buffers, sanding disks, tumblers, lap wheel and motors, polishers, dop stick, and the host of other tools used in the job. Most of them have microscopes, and even ultra-violet lights. Some of the orate fireplace out of rocks he picked up all over the place, and the door knobs for his new home were made out of rhodonite. It's amazing the works of art they produce from common stones.

I noticed also that creating real jewelry with an artistic touch was an outstanding feature of hobbyists in this area where jade, rhodonite, opals, and agates are available in fair quantities. An added incentive was the opportunity of getting an instructor in jewelry-making sponsored by the rockhound club, and the provincial education department.

The rockhound movement came to this province from western United States a little more than a decade ago. The first rockhound club of British Columbia was formed in 1952 in one of the huts on the University campus with a nucleus of 15 members. From this modest beginning the membership increased rapidly, and within a short time the news spread to other parts of the province. After that clubs sprung up mushroom-like all over western Canada.

The objects of forming these clubs were to bring together hobbyists with mutual interests; to arrange field trips for pleasure and educational purposes, hold study groups and allied activities in a friendly atmosphere; arrange like-

With the formation of new clubs in various centres the need for unity between them became pressing so in 1956 the British Columbia Federation of Rockhound Clubs was formed. This attracts thousands of spectators, and also dealers from all over North America.

Here are seen vast collections worth thousands of dollars, and displays of eye-catching jewelry which are instantly transformed into a blaze of riotous colors by the installation of fluorescent lighting. The Victoria rockhounds put on an annual exhibition on a smaller scale at the Memorial Arena here in May, and that also is a major attraction.

History of the "Victoria club and its spectacular success is due to the credit of two outstanding rockhounds—W. F. Erichsen, and E. G. Stalker—two charter members of the club. Although the lives of these two pioneers had taken different paths in the past, a mutually absorbing interest brought them together forcibly. Bill Erichsen's interest in rocks goes back to his childhood. But his vast collection of minerals and crystals from various countries, and the profound knowledge he has acquired dates back to the First World War.

In 1916 while driving through Tanganyika he found a piece of muscovite mica which aroused his curiosity, and whetted his appetite. From then on he began collecting bits of rocks and crystals everywhere he went. Today his fabulous collection is a regular showpiece. Every country represented in this elaborate display.

On retirement he settled in Victoria and was instrumental in forming the first rockhound club, and also in putting on the first exhibition which attracted crowds from noon to midnight. As a result 50 persons recorded their names and addresses as potential members, and the club was off to a flying start.

It was then that Bill Stalker came into the picture. His interest was aroused in 1937 when he first saw a collection of stones at Colonel Schryder's home, which were picked up on the Belmont Beach and Wilsons Fair Ground. Right away he became a convert to rock collecting. Two years later he met J. F. Bledsoe, dean of rockhounds in the area, and under his instruction received his first lessons in cutting, grinding, polishing, and made his first equipment.

At 35 the incredible Bledsoe was still cutting, shaping, polishing stones, and it was he who christened the dark green stone found on the Dallas Road beach—Dallasite. Mr. Bledsoe's collection of hand-polished pebbles stands on display at the museum as a memorial to the efforts of the pioneer of rock collecting in British Columbia.

For many years Bill Stalker worked alone in his basement fashioning crude stones into attractive trinkets, until the Victoria club was formed. Since then he has been one of its most active members, producing some of the finest works of art—such as his outstanding table. Bill Stalker also has among his collection a fossil which appears to be an egg with a chicken embryo inside. It was given him along with a fossilized mouse and cedar cone in 1942 by an army friend who was stationed in Egypt. These fossils were found in the Great Bitter Lake region of the Suez Canal. Quite recently a government geologist said if legitimate it would be a "remarkable discovery—a rare museum piece."

Local rockhounds leave no stones untamed in their hunt for new gems, and the trail leads on to the States of Washington and Oregon. Quite often a rockhound caravan leaves Victoria, and ends up in Mexico after going through places like Priaville, Maury Mountain, Wildcat Mountain, the Idaho border, and on to Death Valley in Utah. Finally they reach Arizona—the rattlesnake country.

"What happens," I enquired, "when you surprise a family of rattlesnakes snugly coiled up between the cactus bush, or under a boulder?"

But the rockhound only smiles and shrugs his shoulders, because a dedicated rockhound experiences no moments of fear in the face of danger. Their slogan is rockhounds never die, they just petrify.

Usually excursions are undertaken at vacation time which adds fun to the trek, and they meet fellow rockhounds across the border. But while the hobbyists enjoy going places, and meeting new people they delight in exploring their own province where there are vast natural resources. Pre-historic rock carvings are to be found at Nanaimo on Vancouver Island.

They are always eager to discover new and worthwhile locations, and they are prepared to hike up to the edges of steep mountains, and cling on to precipitous ledges as long as they can descend with knapsacks full of stones. They hunt in gravel pits such as the one at Hill Sixty, and also in the Sooke fossil beds for rare fossils.

Rockhounding is an outdoor sport and an indoor pastime. It opens the door to the study of geology, engineering, mineralogy, history, geography, and petrology. There are two distinct sides to the hobby—the hunting and collecting of rocks, and the cutting, shaping, and polishing of choice pieces. In addition it is a workshop project where skill and art is necessary, and it is a family affair in which father, mother, and all the members of the family can take an active interest.

Local clubs provide study groups which are well attended, and under the guidance of veterans such as Bill Stalker, and Bill Erichsen. They give lessons in every phase of the line from mineral identification to faceting. Club's friend and godfather George West instructs in jewelry making. He has invented a unique method of teaching amateurs to memorize the names of stones based on their degree of hardness:

"Toronto Girls Can Flirt and Other Queer Things Can Do." This means talc, gypsum, calcite, fluorite, apatite, orthoclase, feldspar, quartz, topaz, corund, diamond.

What does it take to be a rockhound, and why is it so fascinating? It takes an interest in natural history, curiosity about the simple yet wonderful elements that make up our world, and a love of the vast outdoors. Add to this an appreciation of the beauty of form, and the ability to see the texture and the beauty of the minerals in a crude piece of rock by tapping it with the rockhound hammer. This flakes off the outer "rind" of the rock, and exposes the true color. From there the lapidary takes over, and shapes artistic creations.

Rockhound fever is contagious. Today rock collecting is the largest organized, and the most popular hobby in British Columbia. It is spreading like wildfire across Canada as new mineral deposits are discovered. In B.C. there are already nearly 30 registered clubs scattered all over the province, comprising a membership of more than 2,000 enthusiasts. They belong to all age levels—schoolboys to shut-ins and include members of many professions such as lawyers, doctors, retired engineers, machinists, teachers, photographers, bakers, firemen, janitors, secretaries, and housewives.

The hobby has blossomed into a full scale industry and Victoria now boasts two rockhound shops. The secret of its success is togetherness. Groups welcome, discuss, and share their mutual interests. Reason for the fever spreading in British Columbia is expressed by the rockhounds themselves:

"One million North American rockhounds can't be wrong. Our hobby ranks second in popularity on this continent."

Fire Bombs New Threat

Most forest fires are related to the activities of man—industrial operations, careless smoking, indifferent use of fire by the camper, and arson. Natural causes include lightning and spontaneous combustion. A few even have started by falling aircraft, rockets, and guided missiles. But, are there less obvious causes of ignition in the forests?

Glass jugs and cans have been found at the source of forest and grass fires. Could these glass and metal containers start a forest fire by simply concentrating sunlight? The answer is definitely "yes"—but, not in the manner most commonly supposed.

A can ignites a fire differently from the way a bottle does. The spherically concave bottoms of cans reflect and focus the sun's rays at a point near the centre of the curvature of the reflector. Nearly all cans can be bent or deformed to make a similar reflector. Light passing through a bottle containing a clear liquid are bent or refracted so that they focus beyond the bottle. The effect is similar to that produced by a common reading glass.

'We have good chance of saving the ship and we are going to have a ruddy good try.'

A ghost from the past recently played host to 40 former officers and men of the Royal Canadian Navy when the Second World War aircraft carrier HMS Nabob, now the modern freighter Ss. Nabob, inspired the reunion of her war-time crew members—20 years after she was torpedoed and almost sunk by a German submarine.

Owners of the historic vessel North German Lloyd Line, marked the anniversary in Vancouver on Aug. 15, 1964, by feting many of the courageous seamen who sailed their crippled baby flat-top 1,100 miles through enemy U-boats to safety, where she was written off and sold for scrap . . .

Even as a warship, Nabob was distinctive. Although commanded and manned by Canadians, she belonged to the Royal Navy, due to the "intricacies of the U.S. Lend-Lease program."

Under the Lend-Lease Act, Great Britain could acquire escort carriers, but was hard-pressed to man the desperately needed vessels. Canada, too, wished to purchase carriers from the U.S., but could not because she did not participate in lend-lease. Thus it was agreed that Britain would buy the ship Nabob and Puncher, then being built as freighters on the American west coast, and the RCN would man them.

All that remains today of HMS Puncher is her heavy brass bell, on display in the Maritime Museum of B.C.

Commissioned by a care and maintenance crew on Sept. 7, 1943, 15,000-ton HMS Nabob steamed from Tacoma to Burrard Dry Dock, Vancouver, and was converted to an escort carrier. Captain Horatio Nelson Lay, nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King (later Rear Admiral and Vice Chief of Naval Staff) assumed command of the largest ship then operated by the RCN.

However, Nabob got off to a poor start when, undergoing sea trials in the Gulf of Georgia, she ran aground on the sand heads at the mouth of the Fraser River. Fortunately, she sustained little damage.

But, "as the RCN had not yet entered the field of naval aviation, aircrew and air maintenance personnel were provided by the Royal Navy and Nabob's complement finally consisted of 502 RCN and 335 RN personnel."

Upon completion, Nabob bid farewell to Vancouver, the port she would not see again for so many years.

Passing through the Panama Canal, she proceeded to Norfolk and New York. After loading RAF aircraft manufactured in the U.S., she finally reached England.

The next months of her naval career were spent in "working up" her 20 Avenger and Wildcat aircraft to peak performance. On Aug. 1, 1944, she commenced duties with the Home Fleet based at Scapa Flow. But her war career was to be violently short—21 days.

Nabob's first mission, with a task force of Canadian and British warships, was "intended to disrupt enemy shipping in the coastal channels above Bergen, Norway." The second—and last—was an air strike against the mighty German battleship Tirpitz, hidden in one of the countless, winding Norwegian fjords.

It was off Tromsø, Norway, as Nabob prepared to fuel escort ships joining an Allied convoy bound for Murmansk, that the torpedo shattered her starboard side, ripping a 40-foot by 50-foot gash in her soft belly. Almost half her complement were below decks; 21 men died and six were wounded in the explosion that stopped her dead in the Arctic seas.

One of those caught below decks was Victoria Petty Officer Thomas Jefferson, who was sitting beside his bunk with about 60 shipmates when the torpedo struck, plunging the mess into darkness.

Jefferson "could feel cold oil rising in the mess and tried to plug the hole it was pouring from with a wooden plug, but couldn't succeed in blocking it."

By the time he reached the gangway, after fighting his way through lockers that had been torn loose, splintered bunks and other wreckage, the oil was waist high. As he scrambled upward, his greased foot slipped on the metal steps, and he plunged backward into the oily lake. He almost drowned before effecting a miraculous escape.

"The action alarm gong sounded almost simultaneously with the torpedo burst," read an official news release (not made public until a year later) "and the flight deck was soon black with ratings in all stages of dress and undress. Scores had been tossed from their hammocks and bunks and none had waited to collect their gear."

Nearby, the destroyer HMS Kemphorne was torpedoed and went down soon afterward.

Filling rapidly, Nabob's stern began to settle. Her electrical equipment had been short-circuited by the blast, her powerful engine wheezed to a stop, and waves poured over the quarterdeck as her stern sank 17 feet. HMS Nabob, so new to the violence of war, was sinking and her men knew it. What worried them most was knowledge of the volatile 200,000 gallons of aviation fuel in her forward tanks.

"Prepare to abandon ship!" bawled Capt. Lay.

Men scurried about her sloping decks, lowering lifeboats and dropping rubber rafts overside. Suddenly, seven minutes after the torpedo blast, another explosion shook Nabob.

However, she had been spared the second torpedo. Tragically, the destroyer escort HMS Bickerton, but a half mile distant, had taken the torpedo meant for the disabled flat-top. Nabob's listening devices then detected yet another underwater missile, but it sped harmlessly past.

Below the carrier's battered decks was an anthill of feverish activity. Working frantically in the eerie darkness, her exhausted damage parties scoured the ship, closing hatches and doors, sealing off compartments. They did "a magnificent job. Bulkheads were shored, emergency electrical power supplied, ventilating fans started and personnel were able to return to the engine room . . ." They even jettisoned her guns.

In the blackened canteen flat, wounded were placed on stretchers.

Leading the desperate repair crews was Cmdr. (later Captain) Cecil Irving Hinchcliffe, 1065 Southgate, of Victoria. It was his pleasant duty, later, to inform Capt. Lay there was "no immediate danger of the ship going down."

Twenty years later, Capt. Hinchcliffe recalled: "We were hit in the one place we could take it."

"For the first two or three minutes we didn't know if she was going to keep on going, down. We just carried on. There was a certain amount of confusion, but there was definitely no panic."

In the meantime, air crews of 842 Squadron secured their planes on the flight and in the hangar decks, and three RN destroyer escorts were detailed to screen Nabob.

Forty long minutes after the blast, Capt. Lay announced over the loudspeakers: "We have a good chance of saving this ship and we are going to have a ruddy good try to do so." A loud cheer arose from the flight deck.

Then the destroyer escort HMCS Algonquin and HMS Vigilant joined the tight ring of protection around Nabob, as the beleaguered convoy received orders from Commander-in-Chief Home Fleet, Sir Harry Moore, that both Nabob and Bickerton were to be sunk unless they could raise steam.

For poor Bickerton there was no hope, and HMS Vigilant delivered the death blow. As the torpedo smashed into the wounded destroyer's flank, a 300-foot-high column of water streaked skyward. Bickerton listed further to starboard, then slipped under stern first. Her slim bows stood erect for an instant, then she was gone . . .

However, four hours after the blast, Nabob still floated and actually was making headway—three knots. But her chances of safely reaching Scotland, 1,100 miles away, were slim.

That night, as she valiantly struggled to remain afloat and underway, she was trailed by another U-boat. Two Avenger aircraft, piloted by

The pilots later landed on Nabob's warped, listing deck in fog "so dense the stern of the ship could not be seen from the bridge." One of the planes crashed in the gloom, but its pilot was uninjured.

The submarine had once penetrated to within 4,000 yards, but did not get the chance to attack.

HMCS Algonquin then came alongside and removed 203 "non-essential" ratings.

The following two days were spent in strengthening Nabob's dangerously weakened hull and lightening her wounded stern by jettisoning her five-inch guns, bombs and mines.

On the third day, a 33-knot southwest gale caught Nabob on her port bow. The injured vessel "groaned under the punishment she was taking. There were fears that 75 yellow dinghies, removed from aircraft and lashed on deck, might be swept away, removing almost the only hope of rescue if a bulkhead collapsed and the ship sank."

But gallant Nabob had survived man's torpedoes; she now survived nature's storm and, five agonizingly long and nerve-racking days later, limped into the refuge of Scapa Flow. Her epic flight to shelter was ended. As, sadly, was her naval career.

Still trapped in the after between-decks were the bodies of her 21 dead, including three B.C. men.

A July, 1945, editorial of a local newspaper commented: "Although it is nearly a year ago since HMS Nabob, the Canadian-manned aircraft carrier, sustained her all but mortal wound off North Cape, Norway, yesterday's release of the item struck a responsive chord in Victorian hearts as citizens learned one more story of gallantry in action of their sons. It was another epic of seamanship—the return of the damaged vessel through gales to safe anchorage in a British port."

"Tributes have already been extended to Capt. H. N. Lay, OBE, RCN, the commanding officers, whose friends in this city are legion. And with those tributes have gone warm commendation to the Victoria men who played their traditional part in the heroic journey . . ."

An article in a 1956 issue of The Crownest, official RCN magazine, paid tribute to this gallant ship, saying: "If sentiment had prevailed, the wounded Nabob, which had stoutly survived a 1,100-mile journey through stormy seas, would have been restored to service. But the torpedo damage was too great and economy demanded that she be withdrawn from service."

"With the juying off of the Nabob thoughts turned to replacement and Canada was offered the light fleet aircraft carriers Warrior and Magnificent, then building. Had hostilities continued, the intention was that both would be commissioned as ships of the RCN at the same time rather than successively, as was the eventual outcome."

"Maggie," as Magnificent affectionately was known by those who sailed in her, continued in service until paid off in recent years . . .

The gutted hulk of Nabob then was "cannibalized," his being the practice of salvaging all serviceable armament and equipment for use in other vessels. The twisted hull was sold after the war, in March, 1947, to the Netherlands firm of Aris Rijdsdijk-Boss. With her, went the broken frigates Halstead, Ekina and Duff.

Arriving in Rotterdam late in September of the same year, Nabob lost her flight deck to the cutting torches. But she did not accompany her smaller sisters on the final voyage to the melting furnaces.

Instead, her new owners decided her hull was worth saving, repaired all damage, and put her up for sale. But three more years passed before the North German Lloyd Line bought her and rebuilt her as the dry cargo ship she is today. With rare and commendable sentiment, the German owners retained her honored name, Nabob.

Appropriately, her first commercial voyage was to Canada with a cargo of grain.

In August, 1951, the first reunion of former crew members was held in the Chief Petty Officers' Mess, Naden.

Now sailer regularly between Europe and the West Coast, Nabob aroused interest when she docked in Vancouver in August, 1952. There she was spotted by her former navigator, city coroner Capt. Glen McDonald.

Capt. McDonald joined her in Liverpool in April, 1944, and was aboard her when torpedoed.

The Vancouver Province reported McDonald "couldn't believe his eyes when he saw her berthed at Ballantyne Pier."

"I thought she was made into razor blades long ago," he said. "But that's her all right. There's the dent in her bows where we hit the gate vessel in the Firth of Forth."

It was McDonald who prompted the 20th anniversary reunion.

Coincidentally, at the same time he made his discovery, Nabob's sister ship, then the Dutch SS Raki, was docked but 100 yards away. Built in the same Tacoma shipyard, Raki originally was HMS Begum, and also served during the war as an aircraft carrier, being converted for this role in Burrard Dry Dock, as was Nabob.

Another coincidence awaited her two years later, during September's reunion of her wartime crew, when it was disclosed that her present skipper, Capt. Karl Kuhlbg, "was serving in a German warship (the catapult vessel Friesland) just 50 miles away from the site of the torpedoing that late August afternoon 20 years ago."

Among hardy Nabob's present duties as a merchantman, she is a training ship for her company's cadet officers.

Keep Your Cooking Cool ... and Your Figure Trim

Salads are a welcome change of pace when summer comes. Of course we eat salads all winter long but summer salads are a little different. Salads are no longer a woman's world.

Granted wherever ladies gather ... in hotel, tea room or home ... salads reign supreme; but restaurant operators will quickly confirm that more and more men are ordering salad bowls or platters of salad for the midday meal and tossed green salads with their steak.

Men will go for good old potato salad so let's build a meal around this popular standby. We'll dress it up with a garnish of deviled eggs, a rosette of salami, cucumber fans and serve it on crisp lettuce. We'll serve it with piping hot cheese biscuits and a platter of cold cuts. This potato salad is particularly well seasoned ... it calls for caraway seeds but if your family doesn't care for these you can substitute toasted sesame seed.

CARAWAY or SESAME SEED POTATO SALAD
... Two pound potatoes (about 6 medium), 1/2 cup salad oil, 1/2 cup vinegar, 2 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. savory,

1/2 tsp. marjoram, 1/2 tsp. pepper (use white pepper if you have it), 6 green onions chopped, tops and all, 1 good sized celery heart chopped, 2 Tbsp. chopped parsley, 1 Tbsp. caraway or sesame seeds, 1/2 cup mayonnaise, 2 Tbsp. prepared mustard, iceberg lettuce and garnishes.

Cook the potatoes in their skins in boiling salted water until tender (don't overcook). Combine in a small jar the oil, vinegar, salt, savory and marjoram finely crushed and the pepper. Shake these well to blend. Skin the potatoes and slice or cube in a large bowl. Pour the oil vinegar-dressing over potatoes while still warm. Toss to mix. Marinate in the refrigerator for half an hour. Add onion, celery, parsley and seeds. Mix well. Blend mayonnaise and mustard. Add to potato mixture. Toss until well mixed. Arrange in a salad bowl lined with crisp lettuce. Fold over salami slices and fasten with a wooden pick. Garnish around top of salad and top with deviled eggs.

DEVILED EGGS ... Six hard cooked eggs, shelled and cut in half length-wise, 2 Tbsp. mayonnaise, 1 tsp. prepared mustard, 1/2 tsp. horseradish and 1/2 tsp. salt. Remove and mash yolks, mix with mayonnaise, mustard horseradish and salt. Add a dash of Tabasco or Worcestershire if more zip is desired. Spoon the mixture into egg-white shells. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

CHEESE BAKING POWDER BISCUITS ... 1 1/2 cups sifted all purpose flour, 2 Tsp. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/2 cup grated cheese, 1/2 cup salad oil and 1/2 cup milk. Sift dry ingredients into bowl.

SALADS

Add grated cheese. Blend in salad oil with a fork. Add milk, mix until a ball of dough is formed. Dough should be quite soft. Knead gently on floured board. Pat out to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut with floured cutter. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in a 450°F oven until lightly browned, 10 to 12 minutes. Makes 12 biscuits. For soft biscuits place on pan with sides touching. For crispy biscuits, place well apart.

For a real show-off, there is nothing like a cool, shimmering jellied salad. This is one of the easiest and most attractive dishes to serve when you are entertaining. It can be made the day before and there is such a variety of molds that the same recipe can look quite different each time you make it.

Today's Swedish Aspic is particularly lovely ... one layer contains shrimp and hard cooked eggs and one layer is flaked salmon. In between is a ribbon of contrast made creamy smooth with real mayonnaise.

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you need an emergency ice pack? Roll a few ice cubes or some crushed ice in a face cloth and dip this in cold water. Wring excess water out. Place these in a plastic bag and twist the bag.

Now here is the clincher: Use an old nylon stocking and stuff the ice-filled plastic bag down into the leg of the nylon stocking (making sure the ice cubes lie flat), fold or tie the nylon stocking so that the cubes don't slip, and then tie your perfect ice pack in place with the ends of the stocking!

The plastic bag keeps the ice from dripping, the wash rag holds the ice in place, and the ends of the stocking can be tied around any part of the body (neck, arm, leg, etc.) and it holds your ice bag in place.

will serve 12. Eight or, 1 1/2 tsp. salt, 1 1/2 per berries, 8 whole and fresh or frozen 4 1/2-oz. tins, 2 egg yolks dissolved in juice, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/2 quartered, 1/2 cup mayonnaise, and food coloring. This salad is made in four steps.

First step . . . combine water, vinegar salt, dill, pepper berries, all-spice, and bay leaves in a large saucepan. Boil 5 minutes. Wrap salmon in a piece of cheesecloth and place in the boiling liquid. Cover and boil 5 minutes to the inch (thickness of fish), 15 minutes per inch if frozen. Remove fish from liquid to chill. Strain the liquid into a saucepan and with a fork whip in the 2 egg whites. Slowly bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, cover and let stand 5 minutes. Pour through double thickness of cheesecloth or very fine sieve. Measure out 6 cups (remainder may be discarded). Add the softened gelatine to the hot liquid and stir until the gelatine is completely dissolved. Add lemon juice, salt and pepper.

Second step . . . Pour enough of gelatine mixture to form a 1/2-inch layer in a 6-quart mold. Add a drop of yellow food coloring to this layer. Chill until partially thickened. Arrange shrimp and quartered hard cooked eggs (cut side down) in gelatine layer. Chill.

Third step . . . Blend mayonnaise with 1 1/2 cups of remaining gelatine mixture. Pour on top of shrimp layer. Chill.

Fourth step . . . Tint remaining gelatine with little orange colored food coloring. Flake the salmon and arrange on mayonnaise layer. Pour the orange colored gelatine over the salmon. Chill.

Unmold on large platter and garnish with parsley sprigs. If you chill each layer in the refrigerator as you build the salad it will firm quickly. Keep the remaining gelatine mixture at room temperature so that it will congeal more slowly and be just right consistency to use as needed.

Lettuce is not the only salad green . . . endive, slightly bitter; Romaine sweet and crisp; watercress, dandelion leaves, spinach, celery leaves and green cabbage. In the lettuce alone there are a number of varieties. You can be really creative when making a salad. For the greens, use anything crisp, green and edible.

Most greens will keep a week in the refrigerator. To prepare for storage . . . wash them quickly in cold water, drain well and pat gently with a soft towel to blot up the excess moisture. Store in plastic bag, a tupperware container with a tight lid or if storing for just a short time wrap a damp tea towel.

A basic dressing for a tossed green salad is 3 parts oil, 1 to 3 parts vinegar (according to your taste) and salt and pepper. Rather than mix these ingredients first and pour over greens I prefer to pour oil on first and toss to coat every leaf. Sprinkle on salt and pepper. Toss again and then add vinegar, tossing as you add it.

It is said that the onion is the soul of a salad but remember there are different kinds and the power of each differs. Chives are the mildest, the most delicate. Green spring onions add a mild flavor, as do thinly sliced leeks. The dried white onion or Spanish onion may be sliced paper thin, grated or sliced and broken into grace-rings. These differ in strength. And then there is garlic . . . a giant in strength. It must be used with discretion.

For texture and crunch use croutons, crisp crumbled bacon, celery or nuts. To prepare bacon for salad . . . broil slowly until it has lost most of its fat. Place each slice carefully on paper towelling to drain. If you have time dry bacon for 10 minutes in a 150° F. oven. Slices will be nicely curled and can be placed on top of salad for garnish. These will crumble as used.

Croutons should always be added to a salad at the last minute. To make . . . slice bread 1/2 inch thick, remove crusts, cube and dry in oven 300° F. Brown in a skillet in butter, 3 to 4 Tbsp. butter to 1 cup croutons. Stir over heat until they are golden.

Bride's Corner

Salads can keep your cooking cool and your figure trim. Be a seasoning expert and mill your own pepper. Experiment with herbs. Give each salad a frame of ruffy lettuce or other greenery. Have all the ingredients lay cold. For contrast every salad needs a hot accessory . . . even a warm bread or a bowl or mug of soup. To keep blond fruit like bananas, apples, pears, peaches, etc., from turning brown . . . use lemon juice or a color keeper (ascorbic acid). If you let gelatin partially set before adding cubed fruit or vegetables, they will stay suspended. For a stay-put garnish in a molded salad, arrange the design, then pour a thin layer of partially gelatinized over and chill before adding rest of gelatin. To unmold jellied salad . . . run knife tip around edge, invert and hold terry towel rung out of hot water against the bottom of mold.

We have held this letter for five months while we tested Ethel's method. I rolled up my comforters (down or synthetic filled), and if I could squash them enough, I put rubber bands around them; if not, I tied them with a string. The thing I find best about Ethel's idea is that when you need a quilt, comforter or something you do not use often, you can pull it out of that particular closet shelf without spilling the whole kit and kaboodle.

It's 49 years since Cecil Clark joined the once famous B.C. Provincial Police, in which he held the rank of Deputy Commissioner when he retired in 1959, and wound up 34 years' service. For the past 15 years, as one of the province's most prolific free-lance journalists, he has been regaling his readers with his extraordinary knowledge of off-beat people and events.

If you happen to be one of my contemporaries in the early day B.C. government service, you'll probably remember how the Treasury used to let us spend money like water. Water, that is, from a pint-sized measure—if you were pouring drinks for 50 men in the middle of the Sahara!

This wasn't of course only true of B.C.'s government. The same tone prevailed from coast to coast, in an era when rape, murder and arson were as nothing compared to the unauthorized expenditure of public funds. Here the government traveller's meals were held to around 30 cents, and the backwoods provincial police was a combination of Dr. Schweitzer and Sherlock Holmes—for $65 a month!

For an illustration that comes to mind let's drop back in time and space to a flag stop on the Canadian National called Milworth, about nine miles west of Prince George. Only in that day it was on the G.T.P. nine miles west of South Fort George. If you'd been standing there around 6 o'clock on the morning of April 10, 1917 you would have noticed not only a foot of snow on the ground and a zero temperature, but in addition three mackinaw-clad characters who had just dropped off the morning westbound train. Prospectors you may have thought, or trappers maybe, noticing the earflaps on their rat skin caps pulled well down, their pants stuffed in German socks and moccasins. Two seemed to be in their late thirties, clean shaven, tall and well built, one of them carrying a Winchester. The third man was older, short and stocky. The first two were B.C. Provincial constables Charlie Evans and Fred O'Halloran. The third man was a trapper call Steve Hohler. As the train rolled out of sight, they adjusted their snowshoes then plodded off toward the Nechako River.

Their trip this morning was the result of Hohler's visit to Fort George police headquarters the previous day, to report some stuff stolen from his cabin. Things like a roll of tar paper, a saw gauge, a hammer, a plane and some pots and pans.

He followed the snowshoe tracks of the thief for about five miles until they led him to a tent deep in the bush. Just as he took in the fact that some of his property was lying around and maybe debating what to do next, the tent flap was suddenly thrown back and a giant of a man stepped out. A man who evidently wasn't too keen on visitors for his hands gripped a rifle, the muzzle of which pointed in disconcerting fashion straight at Hohler's midriff.

HAIRY MONSTER OF NECHAKO

"What do you want?" growled the tent dweller, in his eyes a queer stare. The uncanny stare suggested to Hohler that maybe this bushland beastnik had stripped his mental gears.

However Hohler managed to stammer that he'd lost his way.

"Then get out of here!" barked the man with the gun. Hohler didn't need a second bidding and retreated.

"He was the biggest man I ever saw," Hohler later told the Fort George police. "Must have been all of six feet four and about 280 pounds and I'll swear his hair and beard hadn't been cut in months."

"And those eyes," he added, "they sure had a wicked look. I think he was as crazy as a loon."

However as Hohler had definitely identified some of his belongings around the man's tent, the police were now headed for the stranger's hideout with a search warrant.

It was after crossing the Nechako that the trip stopped at the cabin of trapper Pete Dishleyway. Pete was a young Slav who in the course of conversation mentioned he too had missed some stuff lately.

"Better come along with us," said Evans, "and maybe you can identify your stuff."

It was finally toward dusk, with Hohler's guidance, that the four men finally reached the wilderness tent only to find it unoccupied. There wasn't a scrap of food on hand, but the stolen goods were in evidence. There was nothing for it but to camp for the night. When morning dawned there was still no sign of the mysterious forest dweller.

CECIL CLARK FEATURE

As the police party had eaten what food they had brought, they had to move out. Leaving things undisturbed they retraced their steps. Halfway back, Dishleyway branched off to his cabin, and finally the other three crossed the river to strike the railway about 30 miles from Fort George.

Then walking to Nicol, the nearest flag stop, they caught the eastbound. Eight miles further on, when the train stopped at Bodnesti, to their surprise Dishleyway swung aboard. He knew he would intercept them and he had a story to tell.

Seems that on his way back to his cabin, he had been surprised to see smoke coming from the chimney of trapper Harper's long deserted cabin. Shucking off his snowshoes, when he crossed the threshold, to his surprise a bearded giant of a man reclined in one of the bunks. As soon as Dishleyway entered, the man leaped to his feet and grabbed his rifle, then went over to the window and shot a glance outside.

It was now Dishleyway's turn to make the excuse that he had lost his way, and after spending a tense and uncomfortable half hour in monosyllabic conversation, he managed to make some excuse to depart.

"That guy's crazy and he's dangerous," was Dishleyway's emphatic corroboration of what Hohler had told them. By the time he finished his recital the train had covered the four miles to the next stop, Chilaco, where all four men got off.

There they borrowed some grub from a section man, and later spent the night in the cabin of a man named Bohidin. Early next morning they hit the trail arriving at Harper's cabin just about sunrise, which was 5 o'clock.

Evans and O'Halloran reconnoitred the cabin, then rushed the door and found the cabin empty.

Outside, however, the tell tale snowshoe tracks were easy to read, and following them up, for the next two and a half hours the four plodded along in single file.

Finally they glimpsed the tent, between the trunks of a light stand of lodge pole pine. Studying it from a hundred yards there was no sign of life, but nevertheless Evans drew his service Colt from his shoulder holster as O'Halloran gave a quick and quiet up and down flip to the Winchester's lever. He'd have a shell in the breech just in case. Hohler and Dishleyway were in the rear and Evans told them to stay put while he and his partner went ahead. As they moved forward he made a motion with his hand for O'Halloran to spread out. Finally when they next paused they were 50 yards from the tent, and it was then that O'Halloran gave a loud "Hallo there!"

As they watched, slowly the tent flap parted and the muzzle of a rifle slid into view. Back of the levelled barrel was a human face—a hairy human face.

"Drop that gun and come out with your hands up!" yelled Evans. Then added "We're not going to hurt you."

Hardly were the words out of his mouth when the muzzle blasted fire and a slug clipped the bark off a tree away in the rear but only a foot from Hohler's face. There was barely a split second pause when O'Halloran's gun replied. The tent flap closed—then silence. The policemen waited what seemed an age, in reality about five minutes. Then slowly they trudged forward. When finally they were close to the tent, Evans whipped the flap aside. In the gloom they made out the mad giant. He was face down, still clutching his rifle. His left hand was in his trouser pocket, where they found he had seven more shells. He had been reaching for one when O'Halloran's slug paralleling the madman's gun barrel had creased his right arm then ripped through his chest. Death must have been almost instantaneous. Anyway it was clear proof that his gun was at his shoulder when death overtook him.

They threw a blanket over the body, then looking around now notice all the stolen goods were gone. Circling out from the tent they found them in a cache 50 or 60 yards away. Apparently the dead man had noticed the tracks left by the police party's first visit, so moved the evidence out of sight.

O'Halloran stayed the night at the tent while Evans went in to Fort George to return the next day with the coroner. Getting the body back to town for the inquest was a bit of a problem but finally the two policemen managed to construct a rough sled out of pine poles, to which they lashed the corpse rolled up in part of his tent. Manfully they dragged their grisly burden back through the bush trail, to finally strike the railway between Nicol and Bodnesti. There they put the dead man on a track car and pumped their way to Nicol, where they flagged a freight.

Next morning a coroner's jury reached a verdict that the unknown had died from a bullet fired in self defence by the police while in discharge of their duty. Though at the same time five or six trappers identified their missing property, the identity of the man himself remained a profound mystery. He was apparently between 40 and 45 years of age, with dark brown hair and blue eyes, without marks, scars or tattoo, and nary a scrap o' paper on his clothing or in the tent to give clue who he was.

Finally he was buried at Fort George while his description went out in circulars to every scattered police post and municipal police office.

In the fashion of the day, Evans and O'Halloran covered their part of the affair in their daily provincial police report which was only filed once a month! This rather reserved and archaic document allowed three lines for each day's work. No matter how serious the investigation happened to be each day's happenings had to contain a minimum of 30 words!

Those who tried to squeeze in any more were looked upon as being somewhat glibly, or worse still, seekers after notoriety or praise! Not ex-actively efficient by modern standards, but that's the way it was, in the good old days.

You'll remember, of course, how I prefaced this story with some remarks about governmental economy? Here's the illustration I was getting at. Veteran Alec Minty (a one time Cariboo stage driver) happened to be in charge of the Fort George district at this particular time and though he didn't get (and didn't expect) any commendatory remarks about Messrs. Evans and O'Halloran, he was rather surprised to get a blast a week or so later.

It came from the provincial secretary's department, via headquarters at Victoria. In those days the provincial secretary's office had charge of a (by today's standards) trivial little allocation for "destitute, poor and sick."

As I remember it you had to be practically at death's door from starvation before you got a cheque for $10. I think, if I remember correctly, there was only about a hundred dollars spent on Vancouver Island in a year. Anyway this letter blasted the Fort George district office for spending $18 on burying the unknown bush dweller. "Why" ran the context "couldn't the police dig a hole at the scene and bury him where he died and thus save this needless expense."

You can just see Alec Minty scratching his head in perplexity, at the full realization of the burden he had put on the taxpayer. However his answer was interesting. They had brought the corpse to Fort George, said Minty, not only for the inquest but also to put the deceased on public display to try and aid in his identification. Fifty people had filed past, and no one gave the wild man a tumble. It was on this note the unorthodox expense got final approval!

You also get something of the flavor of that era, when Mickey Devitt, the chief of police of Trail, later wrote in suggesting the dead man's description reminded him of one of the LeRoi mine bosses who had suddenly vanished leaving a deserted wife and three kids. The police took up the trail, and found the woman in Seattle, working in a garment factory, supporting herself and three children on a wage of $1 a day! She hadn't heard from her husband, didn't want to hear or see him again, but for the purposes of identification she said he had lost the top of his right index finger. The man buried at Fort George had all his fingers. So that was that.

Finally months later came a story, that might have been correct, tossed in by a one-time timekeeper for Foley, Welch and Stewart saying he figured the dead man was probably a German (or Austrian) called Griefner, who five years before had allegedly killed a man at Mile 66.

This took the police back in memory to the hectic days of the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific when 600 teamsters and 1,200 transient horses, along with scores of steam shovels and 2,000 transient laborers chewed their way through the Yellowhead Pass in advance of the track layers. Quite a number of these tough, two-fisted characters died unnoticed, either by falling into rivers or being caught in log jams. There could also have been the stray murder, unreported.

The man in charge of the B.C. Police in that seething scene was a gentleman called Beyts who, by 1917, was said to be a detective with the RNWMP at Yorkton, Sask. I can't recollect whether he was contacted to give his version of the story, but the timekeeper's tale could very well have been correct. It was probably with a guilty conscience that the Yellowhead murderer strove for five years to mask his identity in the wilderness of north central B.C. Finally, when he had to steal to live, by the irony of fate the law caught up with him.

The law that most old-time policemen remember as being most economical in its functioning!

Oak Bay Roses

by E. M. RENOUF

Mention of Oak Bay to many people outside its boundaries immediately brings up thoughts of roses.

The association between the two has for many years been so close as to make the two names almost synonymous. Not that Oak Bay alone produces fine roses, but because of its location and many rose-loving English residents—people in all walks of life—Oak Bay probably has more roses a garden acre than any other municipality. Although many of the rose gardens in the older districts are not visible from the street, being protected by fences or hedges, many fine beds are visible when driving through the Uplands area.

The formation of the Oak Bay Rose Society resulted in still more roses being planted with many fine annual rose shows being staged. Today this society is absorbed in the Victoria Horticultural Society with Oak Bay Rose Society Challenge Cup and the Society's Challenge Trophy being annually competed for at the summer show. Oak Bay residents are still seen exhibiting and each day quite a number of prominent businessmen can be seen in their offices with a rose bud in their lapel.

All these things pay worthy tribute to the queen of flowers, but the finest monument of all is the much frequented Oak Bay Rose Garden at the corner of Newport Avenue and Currie Road.

Close to the busy section it still remains quiet and secluded, protected from the harsh southwest winds by a shelter belt. Here, you may in comfort see, and observe some of the finest later introductions such as Montezuma, Garden Party, Tanya and Golden Slippers growing side by side with the older roses like Frau Karl Druschki, Rose Berkeley, George Dickson.

Particularly charming are the beds of dwarf. Distinction on either side of the entrance, especially when one considers they have been giving patrons pleasure for 27 years. Another feature are the Climbing Blaze and Ruth Alexander trained to vase-shaped frames.

Many roses have come and gone since the summer of 1937 when Reginald Grant advised he had been requested by Mrs. H. R. Beaven to design and lay out a Memorial rose garden.

The choice of a designer was indeed an appropriate one, considering the first hybrid tea rose ever to be awarded a gold medal was that named for his mother, Mrs. W. J. Grant, an award most richly deserved.

Also worthy of recognition, in another form, were the efforts of the late H. R. Beaven in pursuit of his hobby, that of growing and exhibiting roses of the highest standard.

In his garden grew 2,000 rose bushes, 1,200 of which were maidens grown to produce but one rose each, and that for exhibition. The remainder were stock and new varieties on trial, possibly the largest and most comprehensive collection of roses in Victoria at that time.

Competition was keen in those days and among the rose exhibitors were such enthusiasts as Mr. Beaven, Dr. W. P. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Jamieson, W. F. Salisbury, and a few others who brought the standard of exhibits at the Oak Bay Rose Show exceptionally high. Many a fine rose was left undisplayed because it did not quite reach the point of near perfection demanded of it.

Such was the excellence of exhibits and exhibitors, but behind all this were the men who did a lot of the work, men who came to advise, to supervise and to offer the benefit of their training and experience. Men like William Hamilton, gardener to Mr. Salisbury; Alex Mitchell, at that time a gardener at Government House, and many a champion rose had his mark invisibly stamped upon it.

With all this background, and much more, it was no surprise the Oak Bay Rose Garden was such a success from the very start. Changes there have been during the past 28 years, but very few. Quite a number of the original roses are still there.

The Oak Bay reeve and council of the day were quick to appreciate and take advantage of the offer of a rose garden for their municipality and on Aug. 26, 1937, arrangements were completed for setting aside a portion of Windsor Park.

On this corner stood a few scrubby, diseased hollies and a few small stunted oaks, and behind these a stretch of bare unimproved land.

Even in those days of mattock and shovel it was no great job to grub out and burn the few trees. Fortunately all this was done before the opposition became organized.

What the opposition lacked in numbers they made up in energy. Complaints followed the usual pattern—wanton damage, destruction of fine noble trees, despoiling the landscape.

For some days the leader appeared regularly to say his piece but having lots of space to exercise his lungs no one took notice until one day when the boundaries and beds were mostly pegged out he came over to me. Do you know, he said, I think 'his is going to look fine when it is finished. Having previously anticipated this change of attitude my reply was that I thought so too and would he like to see the plans and have them explained?

He certainly would. I met a fine gentleman and made a good friend, one who became enthused enough to often bring his own friends to show and explain to them just what the development was and what to expect of it.

Well, what was this development?

First the marking out of the beds and peeling the sod off the whole area. With a good depth of soil the beds were then dug about 30 inches deep, some of the best soil set aside, reinforced and used again, the remainder spread over the whole of the verges to be grassed.

Into the bottom of each pit went the sod, liberally sprinkled with lime. Next a layer of the good soil, the beds then filled within two inches of the top with new soil, the source of which had been very carefully chosen and the wisdom of choice proving itself through the years right up to the present day and well beyond.

One hundred and twenty yards of fine silky yellow Sooke loam, pastured by sheep for more than 30 years, were used. It was a long haul. Five yards was a tremendous load in those days and there were very few such trucks available.

How many Oak Bay residents remember the sensation of a "tractor train" roaring down the Avenue one otherwise peaceful September evening—a logging trailer with an improvised box loaded with 10 yards of soil. Immediately behind came two five-yard trucks, a 20-yard string of soil which had taken a whole day to 4½ and load by hand, loading machines being an unheard of convenience then.

The beds were cribbed and completed and next came the planting, with the beds lightly surfaced with

QUEEN OF PRINCE RUPERT

While it's not to be expected that next May's inauguration of service from Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert will cause a mass migration from southern Vancouver Island to northern British Columbia, southeast Alaska, and Yukon, certainly the sharp reduction in mileage will bring many of us closer to our north—and Uncle Sam's north too.

Contrast 200 road miles to Kelsey Bay (for a year at least until Port Hardy facilities are developed) with the need to go to Vancouver and cover close to 1,000 miles to Prince Rupert; add a pleasant 17-hour ocean cruise aboard the Queen of Prince Rupert, a stopover if you like in the northern port, and the Alaska run of 30 to 45 hours—and you have a trip to appeal to those whose interest is the coast rather than interior British Columbia. Sitka run adds the extra hours.

Having ridden the Alaska Marine Highway last summer, I was interested to talk with British Columbia Ferries operations manager W. B. Weston and learn some of the points of similarity and of difference between the glacially-named Alaska boats, our own present flourishing system and the Rupert Queen and her as yet unnamed sister ship.

The Matanuska, Malaspina and Taku are indeed a handsome set of triplets, on which I enjoyed comfort, eye appeal, food that was in the main good, and service that was always friendly even when breaking no speed records.

Decor on the Alaska Ferries is strongly coastal Indian in emphasis, with many attractive murals, screens and wall panels in the totem tradition, and colors of furnishings being picked up from the strong tones of these decorations. Our Rupert and presumably her sister ship will be modern rather than regional. "Cheerful" perhaps best describes Allan Edwards' color and pattern choices.

Neutral color range for table tops, bulkheads, woodwork and deck-covering runs from oyster white to brown. A palette of lively shades will be varied from area to area of the ship. It includes: rose, rust, orange, chartreuse and artichoke green—solid colors for upholstery (durable handsome nautical) and prints ranging from subtle two-tone effects to frankly brilliant stripes in informal areas such as the cafeteria. Wood-grained (walnut, mahogany) varnishes will be used extensively in carefully chosen color harmony.

Big, wide full-length settees which are a conspicuous furnishing feature on the Alaska system will not be used on the B.C. Ferries' Rupert run. Neither will jet-type reclining seats, of which there are double rows in various places on Alaska ferries. The reason is that cabin accommodation for somewhat more than 100 is expected to take care of passengers' needs, with no flaking put in lounges and other seating areas.

A forward lounge on the promenade deck will seat 200 in lounge chairs, love seats and other furniture not designed to double for overnight use. A small lounge will occupy about one-eighth of the space on the deck otherwise devoted almost entirely to food service.

One thing I missed sorely on the Alaska ships, present on our existing ferries and to be repeated on the new ones, was outdoor deck seating. Being able to sit out in the sun (or even bundled up against the breezes) is much of the pleasure of any boat trip, I think. We'll have about 100 seats outdoors.

Alaskan staterooms run the gamut from the severely Spartan two-bunk cobbles for which you pay $4.50 overnight per person; to quite delightful two-berth staterooms with private bath and even room to seat a guest or two—priced at $8.50 a berth. These prices are from port to port, varying slightly according to distance. If you don't have a reservation, you put your name on the list and relax until you are called.

Our new overnight ferry service, I am relieved to hear, will have fold-away berths and hand basins and room to do more than barely close the door even in the lowest priced rooms, of which there will be 50 on the lower deck. A few of these will be four-berth, for families who carry their togetherness to extremes.

All other cabins will be two-berth. Eighty of these will be a step higher in convenience, with their own toilets. Both of the afore-mentioned types of accommodation will depend on public (free) showers. On the Alaska boats public showers are coin-op. Twenty 7 by 11-foot deluxe staterooms will have full (shower-type) private baths, plus extra seating space. Every cabin will have an intercom connection to the office—not for room service or making long distance phone calls, but for information, and to avoid the necessity of having a bellboy on every deck.

Public address system will make some use of soft music, probably convey announcements of scenic as well as strictly practical interest.

Such occasional commentary adds immensely to the interest of any trip. It is a much-praised detail of the Alaskan service, but was not working due to some temporary mechanical difficulty when I travelled.

Lockers of the coin-op type, a much needed facility in bus and train depots, become something in the nature of one-armed bandits when provided as a stopgap for storing clothes, luggage and other items on a boat—where you are likely to want a coat, a sweater, an extra film or map any number of times during the day.

I rebelled at buying every change of mind or weather at two-bits, took a chance and stowed anything I wasn't actually wearing or carrying under a seat. I was lucky to find that the storied honesty of the far north had apparently rubbed off on everyone coming from or going to there. Nobody lifted anything.

Queen of Prince Rupert has no plans for lockers, or checking service. One reason Mr. Weston advanced, in addition to the better ratio of staterooms to passengers, was the preponderance of travellers with their own cars.

I somewhat doubt that all that many people will take cars. Family camper type travel, especially into the more remote parts of Yukon, or Alaska apart from the Panhandle, will undoubtedly increase in popularity. But for couples, or singles sticking to the reasonably well-beaten paths, a lot of bus tickets can be bought for the (around $100) charge for taking a vehicle from one end of the Alaska system to another, plus whatever car tariff is settled upon for our part of the route. Vancouver Island Coach Lines will connect with Kelsey Bay terminal, and already has a through service to Port Hardy; both White Pass and Yukon Route and Canadian Coachways serve Yukon and Alaska; Prince Rupert has a public transit system; and ferry-to-hotel transport is fairly reasonable in most of the Panhandle ports—where road mileage is pretty limited anyhow.

Conducted tour business will, I imagine, be a very big thing. Just under 100 vehicles (depending on size) have been allowed for on main car and platform car decks.

I have taken a certain amount of kidding for following the Shrimp Louis around Alaska. Having found it was the most interesting balanced meal I could get for around $2 to $2.50, I made a game of comparing the components. The ferry system served me the most shrimp; Skagway by far the most Louis.

All joking apart, food is an important part of the pleasure of any journey. Potential travellers with suggestively queasy stomachs have already been considerably reassured in print about the Queen of Prince Rupert's stabilizers. These probably won't transform Queen Charlotte Sound into a millpond, but they should surely minimize the plates and glasses hurtling about the saloon (not that kind—Rupert's Queen, like her sisters already in action, will be dry—a sad situation for those who like to approach dinner in a pleasantly anticipatory glow, and a losing proposition for the government if patronage of Alaska Ferries' bars is any indicator).

To return to the dining saloon arrangements: you can pay an exorbitant price for a not very satisfying hamburger; or by sticking to designated meal hours and not going too exotic in your tastes you can get a good full course dinner for $2.50 or even a bit less on the Alaska system. There seems to be no limit to the amount of coffee: no charge for the second cup—or maybe for the 22nd—I never had to wait that long for service! Cream you must ask for—canned after you leave B.C.

Our northern service, according to Mr. Weston, will try to offer consistent value for money spent. Central part of the boat deck will be given over to the galley, which will prepare food for two distinct types of service.

Restaurant, which will seat 50, will be patterned on the white tablecloth service of any first class city restaurant, and (presumably—no prices have been set yet)—competitively priced with such places in Vancouver or Victoria. Mr. Weston, while being careful not to downgrade the excellent food and service we enjoy on the Vancouver runs, makes this distinction. Special British Columbia dishes are likely to be among

MAN NEEDS SELF-RESPECT

Methodism, which sprang from the 18th century revival of Charles Wesley, had become a "respectable" religion by the mid-19th century.

Richard Collier tells us in his book The General Next to God, the Story of William Booth and the Salvation Army, that "the poor, if they came to chapel, entered by another door, to be segregated on benches without backs or cushions, behind a partition which screened off the pulpit."

It was to the drunken outcasts spawned by Britain's Industrial Revolution that Booth addressed his message of salvation; he met them where they were—on the streets.

Booth saw as Christ's work in his age the saving of the thousands of men and women "passing daily into eternal damnation." It was 100 years ago this year that Booth dedicated himself to their salvation.

He, and those who joined the Army, were prepared, in the words of dedication, to "be despised, hated, cursed, beaten, kicked, imprisoned or killed for Christ's sake."

No idle words. The lean ascetic Indian civil servant, Major Frederick Tucker, who renounced all to follow Booth, led an Army crusade of four into India in 1882. The souls he sought were those of India's 60,000,000 outcasts.

To win these people, they embraced the life the outcasts lived.

In England in the same year, 1882, Salvation Army soldiers were knocked down or brutally assaulted. Sixty of their buildings were virtually wrecked by the mob.

In America, officers in California "with only 15 cents between them, rejoiced when hoodlums pelted them with onions and potatoes; these, with a dime's worth of steak made a memorable breakfast."

Women officers shared responsibilities and sacrifices with the men. A particular concern of the women salvationists was the fact that, "One in every 50 Englishwomen was a street-walker."

Many were young.

"Catherine Booth joined thousands with a true story culled from Army files: a pharisaic merchant paid a brothel-keeper cash in advance to obtain a small girl for next Sunday.

"Proud of his skills the keeper lured a child away from Sunday school—then watched the merchant recoil in horror, entering a padded room to confront his own daughter."

Such revelations by the Army did much to result in the passage of a new law, in 1885, raising the "age of consent" to 16.

Possibly the greatest merit of the Salvation Army through its 100 years of service is their love for mankind, in deed. They may hate sin, but they have love for the sinner.

The word "enemy" was never used in their publications in either the First or Second World War.

Their personal approach is typically that of an army officer in Australia who greeted a "vicious old harridan who roached up 275 jail sentences" with—"Good morning, mother. What about coming home for a bite of dinner?"

Not pious exhortation to mend her ways, but a simple, unaffected approach to her as a human being resulted in her forsaking the old life.

Booth's way was to realize a man's first need is self-respect. And in its turn, the Army has won the respect of the world, on its 100th anniversary.

Richard Collier tells us a moving story of how this respect was won. IAN ARROL.

Beacon Hill Summer Cinema

The type of festival or specialized film event which has been featured during the summer in Beacon Hill Park for the past three years is one of 60 such events which take place across Canada every year.

It is interesting to note, however, that Victoria and Hamilton, Ont., were the first places in Canada, in 1948, to attempt this type of film showing. The Victoria film event was held in November of 1948, and lasted three days, with several daily film showings, a display of all audio visual equipment, and speeches by leading citizens on the value of films in the community.

The outstanding success of these two initial events further established documentaries as a permanent tool in the cultural progress of the people of the Dominion.

Although all these film events seem to be motivated by the same basic purpose . . . bringing the best available films to the public . . . there have been many variations on the theme, and frequently in Canada adoption of the specialized festival has resulted. There are international, provincial, local, Commonwealth, Thanksgiving, anniversary, and a host of other types of festivals. One which is particularly interesting has been an outdoor film showing during the summer at Niagara Falls, Ont. This event drew vast crowds, particularly our southern neighbors to whom these films interpreted Canada.

This year's Beacon Hill Summer Cinema, starting July 12, will be similar to the Niagara film event. There are other similarities as well: the spray coming from the thundering falls on a windy day reminds us of the "misty" evenings which we experienced last summer at Beacon Hill Park.

The showing of films in Beacon Hill Park has become a tradition in Victoria. Now in its fourth year, the event is eagerly sought by those who have attended in past years.

Many of those who attended last year's film showings did so with an undaunted determination to see the films in spite of inclement weather conditions. The little old rainmaker in the sky refused to turn off the tap—but did this stop the eager spectators from seeing their evening's entertainment? Not at all. On one of those questionable evenings, heavy with cloud and moisture laden air, they came into the park looking not unlike Grand Bank's fishermen setting off for their day's catch. However, I am sure no Grand Bank's fishermen were ever so colorfully attired or adequately prepared to meet any emergency which might arise as these stalwart spectators of hardy Victoria stock—the sentiments of Beacon Hill Park—striped umbrellas, red rubber boots, yellow slickers, plastic hats. Indeed their preparation was better than ours and frequently a show had to be stopped, not because the audience was leaving, but rather that film and equipment could not withstand the rain.

Protection from rain was only one line of defence against the elements with which they had armed themselves—they contemplated all eventual disaster such as famine, fatigue, or a sudden Arctic coldfront—into the park it all came like an expedition or safari, with plaid blankets, air mattresses, folding chairs stacks of newspapers, food for themselves, for the ducks, and others of God's little creatures which inhabit the park.

One would think that they were embarking with Christopher Columbus on the Santa Maria or even the "Ark" itself for that matter, instead of merely going to an evening's entertainment at Beacon Hill Park. One family, who are frequent viewers, even bring their sleeping bags—so help me this is true, and I know who they are if anyone challenges my statement.

In fact what we should have been doing for the past three years is judging the spectators instead of the films and awarding them the prizes.

This year's Beacon Hill Summer Cinema will be a non-competitive event. It will again be brought to you by the Corporation of the City of Victoria.

Organization and programming of films for the summer cinema are being arranged jointly between the National Film Board and the Victoria Public Library. Again, this year we are grateful to the Royal Canadian Navy for the courtesy of their Gaumont "Arc" projector.

In response to many requests from last year for more National Film Board films on Canadian travel, we are devoting Monday evenings to this attraction. Tuesdays will be specialty attractions, such as a Women's Night, Family Night, and others.

Also by popular request, on Wednesdays we are bringing another "Britain Revisited" program, for five Wednesday evenings.

The first week of August will be Centennial Week, featuring British Columbia Night, Aug. 2; a special Centennial Night on Aug. 3, and Canada's Vacation Playground on Aug. 4.

Programs will be available from the Victoria Visitors' Bureau, and the Victoria Public Library. PAUL COURTICE.

Forty Days of Rain . . . . . If It Rains Thursday

Strange Weather Forecasters

By BERT BINNY

"St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain,
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair,
For forty days 'twill rain one mail."

Thus, couched in rather doggerel rhyme, goes the legend or superstition of St. Swithin's Day which is actually July 15.

The story behind the legend is almost certainly apocryphal. St. Swithin, a Bishop of Winchester and renowned as well for his humility as for his piety, learning and Christian zeal, died on July 2, 862. He left the specific request that he be buried outside the church in "a vile and unworthy place" and, more poetically, "that the sweet rain of Heaven might fall upon my grave."

Apparently this was done but, on July 15 of 971, when Bishop Swithin was canonized, his remains were to be transferred from their hitherto forgotten resting place to a new basilica built by King Ethelwold. The good Saint's displeasure at being not only disturbed after 100 peaceful years but also at being moved around contrary to his expressed wish was shown by a torrential down-pour which, so the story goes, continued for 40 days. The legend then suggests that, after this extended period of inclement weather, the penny dropped "so that the monks saw that the Saint was averse to the plan, and abandoned it."

Then the rain stopped.

St. Swithin, by the way, is not alone credited with the capacity to influence the weather. He shares it with such as St. Medard, St. Gervase and St. Protas in France and St. Godelieve in Flanders. In Germany Seven Sleepers' Day has similar connexions. Here, in Canada, St. Swithin is, as we all very well know, in the same boat as the humble groundhog who makes his weather prediction every Feb. 2. However, this last odd association would probably please and titillate St. Swithin: he was a very modest and human man.

Nor, incidentally, does he seem to have been at all vindictive—a twist unlooked for in Saints anyway. Vindictive he certainly would have been if a slight on his personal wishes had been visited upon all posterity.

St. Swithin is mostly associated with the City of Winchester in the County of Hampshire; at one time the capital of England.

His shrine, built in 1202, was destroyed at the Reformation. The cathedral was once the Church of the Benedictine Priory of St. Swithin and a medieval figure of him remains in the Chapel of St. Cross. A street, a church and two schools are named after him and at the bottom of Winchester's main street, Broadway, there is a small bridge across the "liver itchen" replacing one originally put there by the Saint himself.

Very little of this, however, proves or disproves the superstition of St. Swithin's Day. Accurate weather records do not go very far back though proponents of the validity of the legend can point with pride to the year 1946 when it rained for 42 days after a wet July 15. They may also derive some comfort from the attested fact that the Duke of Monmouth—he of the unsuccessful rebellion bearing his name in the southwest of England—was executed at Tower Hill on St. Swithin's Day, 1685, after a fortune teller had predicted that he would be a great man if he outlived it.

It has already been pointed out that an assortment of Saints are credited with an influence on the weather. But so, also, are spiders, swallows and soot. When spiders forsake their webs in favor of sheltered crevices, rain is coming. If swallows fly low bad weather is indicated. And the same sort of thing can be expected if soot falls down the chimney.

These superstitions, clearly first based on observation, now have scientific support. They are valid enough to be removed from the realm of superstition and placed in the category of proven fact.

Rooks, also are held to forecast the weather by their actions. If they build nests high in the trees, good weather is a-coming and vice versa. Again, if they leave their nests early in the day, that day will be fine and, again, vice versa.

There are numerous sayings suggesting that the weather on Christmas Day presages the weather later on. The only rumble about these is that they appeared prior to the year, 1752, at which time Christmas fell on Jan. 6. It's no use at all basing one's prognostications on the state of affairs on Dec. 25.

A mild January is considered bad for humans and crops: a wet March the same. But a dry, cold March is a good sign for the following months.

Fog in early April means floods in June but a cold April is an auspicious omen. Thunder on April Fool's Day was considered particularly fortunate and everybody has heard how March winds and April showers—the latter virtually sanctified by Al Jolson—bring May flowers.

So it all goes. I myself, I must confess, am not worried sick about the weather next Thursday.

I am not superstitious though I have especially noticed that the rooks built high in February, it was dry in March and clear in April.

With all this prescience I don't even have to know the weatherman's phone number.

original soil. The stock in the Beaven garden had by then been carefully sorted and tabulated and the varieties and plants required for the various beds selected. All the plants except two beds of Mrs. A. R. Barrackough, one on either side of the entrance, and two beds of dwarf Distinction on either side of the arch came from the Beaven collection.

The actual layout of the beds was such that it not only featured good roses, but also displayed them to best advantage. The colors blended into one another to present a most pleasing and colorful overall effect.

In all, 616 roses were planted, 448 bush in the beds, 66 Dwarf Distinction, with 61 American Pillar along the fences and 28 Standards.

With the spring of 1938 came the seeding of the "rains," then in the early summer the spring and handing over by the donor to the municipality of a lovely rose garden for all to enjoy, a fitting tribute to a great rosarian and an honor to a gracious lady.

The garden party which followed at the Beach Drive home was something unique in the history of Victoria.

Never before had there been witnessed such an aggregation of garden skill and knowledge as was gathered together that sunny afternoon.

Invitations were confined strictly to rosarians and gardeners, including all the head gardeners in government and private service within the district, an event to be long remembered by all.

With all this the garden was still not complete; it required a journey to England to find a suitable sundial which arrived here and was installed in early autumn. Oak Bay could never be the same without its roses or its Rose Garden, nor would the rose garden be worthy of its name without its sundial.

That this sundial has a history is certain. I only wish I knew its history as well as I know that of the Oak Bay Rose Garden. Silent stands this stately custodian of time, adorned by the emblem of its Motherland, anointed with its fragrance. Long may it record the sunny hours and long may the surrounding roses warm the hearts of all who come to admire, to reflect, or perhaps to seek some faint ray of comfort.

Ferrying North doesn't start south again until late morning, you won't be brot out of your berth in the early northern dawn.

Initially Kelsey Bay to Rupert run will of course be on an every other day basis; with the launching of the second ship, daily runs will start.

Alaska ferries operate on a six-day schedule, which means that each port gets skipped one day a week, so if you're part-hopping without a fixed plan of your own, it's well to keep close track of the schedule in order to make the most of interesting events. For instance, the Chilkat Dancers dance only when cruise ships are in port at Haines; Petersburg is said to "jump" on Saturday nights when the fleet's in. It is complicated to schedule a stop-over in Sitka; short boat cruises on the Sitka can only be made when tide's high at Wrangell. I was lucky to see this river's many meandering channels from a plane already chartered from Alaska Coastal Ellis. I don't recommend the much advertised paddle wheeler; four days aboard would give me cabin fever.

A point about Alaska Ferry travel: don't count on making any acquaintance with the ports when making a straight run. You dock; you disembark passengers and cargo; you load and you're underway. Lovely trip though!

gourmet features. Restaurant will operate in meal hours to be determined.

Cafeteria, seating an equal number, but with naturally faster turnover, will be a popularly priced operation where generous cold plates will be the feature, along with soups and a few other simple items. It is expected that hot breakfasts will be available here. Cafeteria service will likely be available during most of the trip.

In winter, all food service will be concentrated in the cafeteria to save staff, and naturally emphasis will not be cold plates.

Put the two ferry services together, and we should have a pretty good deal for seeing the coast in a rather flexible fashion—cheaper than the cruise boats and allowing the leeway of deciding to make stopovers when and where you please.

With a probable late morning departure from Kelsey Bay, arrival in Prince Rupert will be timed to allow those who are not stopping over to catch the next ferry north. Since the boat

A Fashionable Wedding and A Historical Auction

By JAMES K. NESBITT

A glamorous, historical auction, and a fashionable wedding—there I was, reading The Colonist of 1906 when I became bogged down in a glamorous, historical auction and a fashionable wedding.

Auctions have always been a feature of Victoria life, and, in days long gone, the weddings were said to be as elegant as those in San Francisco.

So, while I should have been paying attention to modern life, in a busy, bustling world, there I was reading up on an auction and a wedding of nearly 60 years ago.

It was 1906. Sir James Douglas, the father of Victoria and the founder of British Columbia, had died in 1877 in his big house in James Bay, where the new museum-archives complex will rise, and his widow, Amelia, described by one historian as "modest as a wood violet," died there in 1880. For the next 18 years members of the Douglas family lived in the rambling place, surrounded by orchards and gardens.

In 1906 came the auction, and what a scramble it must have been, for here was not only history but elegance.

The Colonist told of the big event, with a fancy introduction, thusly: "Lovers of good old English mahogany had a field day at the erstwhile gubernatorial residence in James Bay, when the fine collection of furniture imported by the late Sir James Douglas was put up to auction by Mr. Joshua Davies.

"The old colonial residence, with its beautiful grounds, is a unique memorial of bygone days in Victoria and forms a curious and interesting contrast to the modern style of architecture which predominates in the city today.

"There are those who prefer the modern house, who will claim that convenience is better than picturesqueness, but in the old times people lived more at their ease and had more leisure in which to appreciate solid comfort.

Today, of course, we think that in 1906 people had lots of leisure, and did not prefer convenience to picturesqueness, but people of that year looked back 80 years with nostalgia, as people of today look back, and there must have been more leisure then for The Colonist, writing about an auction, burst into philosophy:

"Compare an old English mahogany armchair with a Canadian rocker! In one there is poetry, in the other the dullest prose. Who can read Dickens, Fielding or The Edinburgh Review with any satisfaction in a modern chair? It only suggests The Chicago American or The Financial News.

"Then again, there is the mahogany dining room chair, heavy, solid, stuffed with horsehair, leather covered, round-backed. Sitting in such a chair one naturally looks forward to roast beef, jugged hare and a bottle of real old crusted port. The cheap American chair suggests nothing so good or wholesome."

After this monumental introduction, The Colonist got around to report the Douglas auction: "The future had, of course, a certain historical interest which added to its value. A large number of ladies and gentlemen attended, the former being naturally the more numerous, and there was some spirited bidding at times."

One wonders today where the Douglas furniture is. Much of it must still be in Victoria. I know the whereabouts of one or two pieces, but doubtless, during the nearly 60 years many pieces must have changed hands several times, and the present owners may have no idea what they possess was once in the James Bay mansion of Governor Douglas.

Here are some of the details: "A fine mahogany dining room table, having four leaves, 4 ft. 6 in. wide and 10 ft. 8 in. long was bought by Mr. W. Ward for $50.

"A mahogany sideboard, 6 ft. long and 4 ft. 8 in. high, fitted with cellaret, drawer and cupboards provoked some keen bidding and was eventually knocked down to Mrs. Gunter for $80.

"There was also some keen competition for a set of 12 dining room chairs to match the table and sideboard, and these were bought by Mr. Harris (likely either Rex or Ches, grandsons of Douglas), for $132, a fairly high price. An English plate mirror, 3 ft. 8 in. by 4 ft. 6 in., was sold to Mr. Booth for $30, and Mrs. F. B. Pemberton became the owner of a marble-top mahogany table for $6.

"In the breakfast room a dozen mahogany chairs were knocked down to Mr. W. Ward for $136, and Mrs. Clapper purchased a sofa for $47.50."

Members of the Douglas family had to buy grandpa's furniture: "Some pretty tall bidding was made for an English loo table, size 4 ft. 3 in., which was eventually bought for Mr. Harry Dallas Helmcken, for the high price of $85, the auctioneer remarking that Mr. Helmcken meant to have it anyway, at any price, since it belonged to his grandfather."

So the auction went, everyone having a fine time, and some of the wedding guests dropping in to see how things were going:

"Mr. R. W. Harris obtained possession of a mahogany wardrobe, 7 ft. high and 4 ft. 8 in. wide, for only $22. An Ahmednagar Indian rug 9 ft. 2 in. by 14 ft. was purchased by Mrs. R. Allen for $110.

"In the front drawing room the prices paid were pretty moderate. A grandfather clock, which Mr. C. E. Redfern, the jeweler and clock maker, estimated to be 75 to 100 years old, was sold to Mr. James Gillan of San Francisco for $35.

"Mr. Ward bought an English loo table, 4 ft. 2 in. for $65, and Mrs. Sweeney became possessed of a mahogany easy chair and sofa for $13.50 and $12 respectively. A Persian palace rug was sold to Mr. Dutton for $82.50.

"In the back drawing room Mr. W. Ward was fortunate enough to secure a very handsome rosewood wardrobe, with a satin maple interior, and measuring 8 ft. high, 5 ft. wide and 21 in. deep, for $30. Mr. Keith bought a handsome easy chair for $25 and Mr. J. W. D. York bought a mahogany bookcase." (Mr. York still has this bookcase in his home on Granite Street.)

A noted school teacher, writer, traveler and general character-about-town, was at the Douglas auction: "The books were put up in odd lots, Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, Mr. Gosnell and Mrs. Matthews being the principal buyers.

"Mrs. Matthews secured an 1843 edition of Fielding's works in 10 volumes at 90 cents a volume and Miss Cameron, one of the city's most learned teachers, paid $6.50 for 20 volumes of assorted English poets, dated 1776. Mr. Gosnell took 18 volumes of Brewster's Edinburgh encyclopedia (1830) for the large sum of $1.

"Upstairs some bedroom furniture was sold, $70 being paid by Mr. Abbott for an old English clothes press, 8 ft. high.

"A four-post bed, with canopy top, fetched $25, and a fine chest of drawers went for $12.50."

Yes, it was quite an auction, and it was quite a wedding the very same day: "St. John's Church was the scene—when Miss Beatrice Constance, only daughter of Mrs. R. W. Janion, Cadboro Bay Road, became the bride of John Harold Poff, agent at Victoria of the Sun Life Company of Montreal.

"The well-known edifice of iron was very well filled—the wedding procession proceeded down the aisle, preceded by the by the surprised choir. Rev. Percival Jones read the marriage service. His Lordship Bishop Perrin said the prayer as the bride and groom knelt before him—from the pulpit Canon Beaulieu read the exhortations of St. Paul and St. Peter to husbands and wives.

"Dr. Hermann Robertson, at the organ, played the Mendelssohn wedding march as the bride and groom swept out of the church—the cynosure of all eyes. The music was specially selected by Major Ross Munro, the chairman, and Dr. Robertson, a friend of both bride and groom—the ushers were Messrs. R. B. Powell, Harry Pooley, J. W. Bridgeman and F. Lewis.

"The bride leaned on the arm of her husband, her face aglow with smiles, and then came the attending groomsmen and bridesmaids—Mr. C. S. V. Branch of Vancouver, with Miss Victoria Phipps, Mr. Boyd of Vancouver with Miss Hazel and Mr. Harold B. Robertson with Miss Helen Prior."

The ensembles were said to be the very last word: "The gown of the bride was of white brocade satin, the design being in marguerites and gypsophilia, and trimmed with Duchess lace and orange blossoms. Her long veil was kindly lent by her grandmother.

"The bridesmaids were gowned in crepe-de-chine, trimmed with string-colored lace, with turquoise colored bands of velvet at the waist and throat. They wore white hats trimmed with marguerites and carried bouquets of sweet peas. Each wore a half-crescent pale blue enamel brooches, with shamrocks in the centre, the gifts of the bridegroom.

"The little flower girls, the Misses Florence Smith and Thelma Dumbleton, looked dainty in dresses of white china silk, with hats to match.

"The mother of the bride wore a dress of pearl grey brocade, lined with black and white Irish design, with a bonnet of black and white and a bunch of pink roses."

The motor car had arrived in Victoria by 1906, but on this particular occasion "the bridal party and guests entered their carriage" and rode out to Cadboro Bay Road for the reception at the home of the bride's mother.

Well, there you have it—an historic auction and fashionable wedding the same day in the Victoria of 1906.
